Pool bond floats

Big margin

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls voters decided Tuesday night they want a new pool.

By almost 70 percent, they approved a $500,000 bond issue for the project, which will be built on the site of the old municipal pool at Harmon Park.

The City Council had thrashed the design and location of the proposed new pool around thoroughly over the past six months, leading some to speculate that the issue might fail.

Tuesday night, as the precincts were tabulated one by one at City Hall, the vote hovered close to the two-thirds majority needed for approval.

Councilman John Peterson, who had worked hard for the issue, sat over an adding machine, clacking out numbers and giving periodic readouts.

A ripple of doubt ran through the knot of people assembled when the vote from the Fourth District, that which includes the northwest sector of the city, farthest from Harmon Park, came in. A 223-to-147 spread there dropped the percentage to 66.9, its lowest of the evening, only two-tenths of a percentage point above the majority needed for passage.

But that doubt soon was replaced with smiles when a vote of 281 to 74 from the Sixth District, the northeast sector of the city, provided the margin needed for victory.

Peterson said he was "gratified beyond all means" by the results. "I don't know if I've ever worked on anything so hard in my life."

He said he had given the issue only a 50-50 chance going into the election.

Dave VanEngelen, who headed a bond-promotion committee, said he felt the decision of the council to move the pool project back to Harmon Park toward the end of October was a key to victory.

He said there were problems with locating the pool at Frontier Field that "could have led to defeat."

Among these, he said, was a fear of parents about several dangerous intersections and heavily traveled streets in the vicinity.

But, he said, "It came down to do you want a pool or not?"

The committee mailed a brochure to more than 2,750 registered voters in the city. That brochure explained that the $500,000 bond issue would cost only 12.8 cents per year, per $1,000 of assessed valuation. This works out to $6.40 per year in additional property taxes on a $50,000 home.

Beer tax OK'd

In 2 cities

KETCHUM — Hotel and lounge patrons will continue to pay municipal tax on lodging and drink prices in Ketchum and Sun Valley.

The two cities' local option taxes were extended by overwhelming majorities Tuesday.

A five-year extension on the 5 percent tax was approved by 233 Sun Valley voters, 82 percent of those casting ballots. Only 53 voters opposed the measure.

In Ketchum, 535 of the 675 voters who cast ballots on the measure — 79 percent — approved a two-year increase of that city's 5 percent tax. The turnout was 70 percent of the city's registered voters.

"It indicates, with 82.1 percent approval in Sun Valley and 79 percent in Ketchum, that even with $3,000 to $4,000 spent by bar owners to defeat it, it is supported overwhelmingly by the electorate of the two communities," Ketchum Mayor Jerry Seiffert said Tuesday night.

"Assuming 100 voters moved out since a previous registration, I would say that's a phenomenal turnout," said Seiffert, who himself was re-elected over write-in candidate Royce Milasky.

Chuck Webb, the assistant general manager of the Sun Valley Co., expressed dissapointment, but not surprise, at the results.

"It became an emotional issue because they began talking about essential services. We still think it's an unfair tax. We will continue with our lawsuit," he said.

Interest in the tax on lodging and liquor sold by the drink was spurred by an advertising campaign, conducted by some local businesses, in opposition to the tax.

That campaign reportedly cost between $3,000 and $4,000.

Proponents and opponents of the tax believe interest in the tax questions, and not the council and mayoral races, was responsible for the unprecedented number of voters registering during the final week before the election.

In Ketchum, 404 of the city's voters, or 41 percent, registered to vote in the last week of registration, said Betty Coles, the city clerk.

In Sun Valley, where there are 371 registered voters out of 545 permanent residents, 166 were newly registered for Tuesday's contest.

That large registration effort was attributed mainly to an effort by the Sun Valley Co., the city's largest employer, to encourage employees to register, city clerk Jack Brown said.

CAMPAIGN '83 City elections

TWIN FALLS -- Twin Falls voters have elected one incumbent City Council member and dropped another, in an election some predict may change the tenor of city government significantly in the coming year.

Incumbent Gale Kleinkopf, a research scientist, led all candidates Tuesday, with 1,996 votes, when the final precinct reported at 8:55 p.m.

Incumbent Alan Wubker, a contractor, came in fifth in the running for the four open council seats. He got 1,088 votes.

Three candidates who had campaigned on a need to ease restrictions on businesses in the city won the other three remaining seats.

Doug Vollmer, a real-estate appraiser and the president of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, and Jack Miller, a contractor and the chairman of the city Planning and Zoning Commission, ran neck-and-neck for second and third positions.

Each man come in second in five of the city's 10 precincts. Vollmer ended the night with 1,646 votes, while Miller received 1,627.

Erik Andersen, a loan officer for a mortgage company, finished fourth with 1,393 votes.

The three other candidates trailed the main field.

Security-business owner Lauren Craig tallied 804 votes; hotel manager Ernest Vasquez received 683; and sewing-center owner Calvin Beutler trailed with 646.

A total of 74.4 percent of registered voters turned out for the election, which also saw a $500,000 pool bond issue earn the needed two-thirds majority for passage.

Kleinkopf, who was appointed to the council last January to replace Bud Cheney, was surprised as results showing him leading in every precinct were tallied on a white scoreboard at City Hall.

"I wouldn't have expected it, but I'll take it," he said, when the final tally was registered.

He predicted that the new council, featuring three new faces, will be a "good, workable" council.

He said he had a good feeling about his chances

Final results — B1

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — Voters in Castleford and Jerome school districts turned down bond issue proposals in their respective areas Tuesday.

In Castleford, a $1.3 million bond issue that would have given the district a new high school lost by only 19 votes. In Jerome, a proposal for issuing $195,000 in bonds to purchase a 20-acre tract of land for future building gained only 52 percent of the votes cast. In both cases a two-thirds majority was needed to pass the issues.

Castleford school officials said there were 323 yes votes and 191 no votes, a 62.8 percent for margin, but failing to hit the necessary 66.6 percentage for approval of the bonds.

Loss of the bond issue leaves Castleford school students with a 62-year-old high school building and a shop building that instructors and school board members say is far less than adequate.

Superintendent Lafe Brethauer said Tuesday night that board members were meeting to attempt to analyze the election and discuss what alternatives the district has now.

"Our primary concern is to give the students the best education we can and we thought this was the answer . . . It is sad when a president can be elected by 51 percent of the votes but we have to have 66.6 percent to build a school," he said.

Brethauer said a bond issue election for $1.05 million went down to defeat six months ago by essentially the same margin.

"Last time we needed another 18 votes and today we lost by 19 votes," he said.

Jerome's loss came in a vote of 891 for and 820 against the proposal to buy school land.

School board Chairman Nancy Cranshaw said the results were dissappointing but said the board will go ahead with a needs assessment study planned for next year.

"We will also attempt to find out what the residents of the district want us to do," she said. "The problem is still there and it has to be addressed."

Democrats score, Evans claims seat

By CLAY F. RICHARDS
UPI Political Writer

Democrats won the governorships of Kentucky and Mississippi Tuesday, but in the state of Washington, where President Reagan's policies were on the line, Republican caretaker Sen. Daniel Evans defeated liberal challenger Mike Lowry.

Lowry, a Democratic congressman, had attacked Evans as being a mouthpiece for Reagan's policy on Grenada and Lebanon — a label that apparently did not hurt the popular former GOP governor. With 17 percent of precincts reporting, Evans had 75,495 votes or 56 percent, while Lowry had 58,943 votes or 44 percent, in the race to fill out the final five years of the late Henry Jackson's Senate term.

History was made in the off-year 1983 elections as Kentucky elected Democrat Martha Layne Collins as its first woman governor and Philadelphia voters elected 45-year-old W. Wilson Goode, the son of sharecroppers, as their first black mayor.

In Mississippi, Democratic Attorney General Bill Allain was elected governor in a mudslinging race dominated by charges of homosexual activity.

Kathryn McDonald, wife of the Georgia congressman who was killed when the Soviets shot down a Korean passenger jet Sept. 1, lost her bid to fill her conservative husband's House seat.

It was a good night for mayors, with incumbents Dianne Feinstein of San Francisco, Donald Schaefer of Baltimore, Kathy Whitmire of Houston, Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., and Pete Crivam of Des Moines winning re-election, but Mayor Maurice Ferre of Miami was forced into a runoff.

A ban on moose hunting in Maine was being soundly defeated, but an effort was succeeding to save from the wreckers ball an historic Washington, D.C. tavern where British commanders watched the White House burn in 1814.

Mrs. Collins will become the first woman governor in the nation since the death of Connecticut Democrat Ella Grasso in 1981. A seasoned campaigner now serving as lieutenant governor, she defeated Republican state Sen. Jim Bunning, a former professional baseball star and political rookie.

Senators working in bomb's rubble

By PAUL A SCHWED
United Press International

WASHINGTON -- The FBI reviewed videotape from a Capitol security camera Tuesday seeking the identity of a bomber who planted an explosive charge near the Senate chamber that ripped a 13-foot-high gash in an interior wall.

The explosion late Monday night shredded prized paintings, damaged both the Republican and Democratic cloakrooms, and ripped a door off its hinges. It also triggered a rash of bomb threats, including one at the Pentagon, one in the House, another at the Capitol subway stop and a fourth that forced the evacuation of the Republican National Committee building several blocks from the Capitol. No bombs were found in the incidents.

The Senate carried on business as usual, amid heightened security.

Looking for clues to the identity of the bomber, the FBI reviewed videotape from cameras trained on hallways leading to the alcove where a bomb was slipped behind a window seat, about 30 feet from the Senate chamber. Authorities would say little about the footage except that it showed a lot of smoke.

Senate Sergeant at Arms Larry Smith said the Capitol switchboard was warned of the bomb six minutes before the blast. An anonymous caller said the bombing was a reaction to American military action in Lebanon and Grenada.

No one was injured in the blast -- thanks perhaps to lawmakers' ability to wrap up work on a military spending bill earlier than expected.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, sobered by a walk through the littered, vaulted corridor where the blast shattered windows and floor tiles, told reporters, "I expect there would have been extensive loss of life if the Senate had been in session."

But the Tennessean declared, "The Senate will not be deterred from its business. We'll do that in the rubble."

A grandfather clock that has stood outside the chamber since 1859 was stopped by the blast, which occurred at 10:58 p.m. EST.

Troops took oath to queen

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (UPI) — An Army spokesman Tuesday retracted earlier denials that a group of military police officers from the 82nd Airborne Division in Grenada took an oath of allegiance to the queen of England.

"A platoon from the 82nd Airborne did sign some statements someone may have interpreted as swearing allegiance to the queen," said Mike Shutak, a Fort Bragg spokesman.

Shutak issued the retraction a day after other Fort Bragg spokesmen denied published reports 27 MPs had taken the oath because they were working with a 200-member police force keeping order on the Caribbean island following the Oct. 25 U.S. invasion.

Soldiers from Fort Bragg, the home of the 82nd Airborne, were sent to the island as part of the invasion force.

Greyhound still optimistic

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Greyhound officials expressed confidence Tuesday that many of the 12,500 striking employees will accept an order to return to work next week when the nation's largest bus system plans to resume operations.

Leaders of the Amalgamated Transit Union urged the strikers to reject the company's latest ultimatum, which demands that they return to work or be replaced.

Greyhound spokesman Don Behnke said responses to a company letter, sent to employees and setting a Monday deadline for acceptance of the latest offer, were to be returned to each striker's immediate supervisor.

FCC won't change rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Communications Commission Tuesday denied a request to change parts of the Fairness Doctrine that require broadcasters to provide free time to people or groups with opposing political viewpoints.

Eighteen groups including CBS, Gaylord Broadcasting, Metromedia and the National Association of Broadcasters had asked the FCC to declare that when time is sold for political advertisements, whether during or outside a campaign period, the broadcasters be obliged only to sell time for rebuttal.

"Broadcasters' concerns here are that they have to give away some free time — the argument they put forth really falls flat on First Amendment grounds," said FCC Chairman Mark Fowler in joining a unanimous denial of the request.

Bunker Hill order sent back

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has directed an Idaho federal judge to determine the legal validity and effects of a settlement in an employee-benefits dispute between Bunker Hill Co. and the United Steelworkers of America.

Saying several matters needed clarification, the court declined to uphold a settlement on the continuance of medical, dental and life insurance coverage for workers laid off when the company shut down its Kellogg, Idaho, smelter in early 1982.

Bunker argued that a July 1982 compromise agreement on the benefits dispute should result in dismissal of a class-action lawsuit in which former company workers sued for extended benefits.

But the appeals court said Tuesday that U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan of Boise must hold further hearings because it was unclear whether the out-of-court settlement was intended to include the claims listed in the lawsuit.

MOSCOW (UPI) — One day after Yuri Andropov's conspicuous absence at the Soviet Union's most important parade, the official Pravda newspaper Tuesday prominently displayed the 69-year-old leader's portrait in an apparent effort to dispel speculation about his health.

Andropov looked healthy and robust in the picture, displayed in Pravda beneath a photograph of Kremlin top brass reviewing Monday's parade. One Western diplomat said he believed the October picture had been touched up to allay fears about Andropov's health.

A Communist Party General Secretary has not missed the Revolution Day parade in 53 years. The late President Leonid Brezhnev always turned out despite years of ill health, even appearing three days before he died of a heart attack last November.

France sells Iraq jets

By United Press International

Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson Tuesday ended French silence about the shipment of five Super Etendard bombers to Iraq, announcing the sophisticated fighter planes arrived in Iraq early last month.

On the war front, centered for the past week on the Penjwin sector 200 miles northeast of Baghdad, Iraqi warplanes Tuesday attacked Iranian forces, inflicting heavy casualties, the Iraqi News Agency said.

Protesters greet Reagan

TOKYO (UPI) — About 1,500 anti-Reagan demonstrators wearing white helmets and face masks paraded with raised fists through a suburban Tokyo park Wednesday, hours before President Reagan was due to arrive for a four-day visit.

Authorities allowed radical groups to hold a carefully monitored protest demonstration at the park about 3 miles west of Tokyo's Haneda airport on the southern outskirts of Tokyo.

Reagan, on his first visit to the Far East as president, was to be greeted later Wednesday at that airport by U.S. Ambassador Mike Mansfield and Japanese officials.

all along, but he was surprised that Wubker had lost.

Wubker speculated that his defeat could have been due to his not having campaigned hard enough. But he said it was also "one of those things. People sometimes look for a change in city government."

Going into the election, he thought he would be re-elected, he said.

In being unseated as an incumbent, Wubker, the youngest member of the present council, went out as he came in. In 1979, he defeated an incumbent, Gordon Cox, to gain a seat on the council.

Vollmer, who came in second, said he looked forward to a "significant change" in the council. "Somewhat of a conservative element" was elected in a year when there really were no major issues, he said.

It showed people felt there was a need for a change, particularly in the easing of business regulations, Vollmer said. "The community is looking for growth."

He attributed his success to showing people that he really wanted the job, by spending a fair amount of his own money on signs and advertising.

Miller agreed that a "three-way street-fight" might have been brewing for the two final positions. He said he was particularly gratified by his victory since he was not born in Twin Falls.

Andersen said he was surprised that he had defeated Wubker by such a large margin. He said it showed people agreed with his position that a councilman should be a "steward" of the city.

Andersen came in fourth in every precinct except the Ninth, the Harmon Park area, where Wubker beat him by three votes.

"It's hard to put your whole heart into something, when half of it is broken," Mrs. McDonald said in conceding defeat.

Allain, Mississippi's Democratic attorney general, beat Republican Leon Bramlett after a campaign in which Allain was accused by the GOP candidate's backers of consorting with black homosexual prostitutes who dress as women. Allain, 55, denied the charges, saying "there's not one strain of truth in them." Bramlett disassociated himself from the allegations.

"I have often said a person's character is one thing and their reputation is what people think and perceive it to be," Allain said in a victory statement. "Tonight, I think the character and reputation of this state came together and people all over America will know it."

In Kentucky, with 84.5 percent of the vote counted, Mrs. Collins had 442,313, or 53.8 percent, while Bunning had 368,704 or 44.9 percent.

In Philadelphia, with almost 95 percent of the vote recorded, Democrat Goode led with 369,178 votes, or 55 percent of the vote, compared to 249,998 or 37 percent for Republican John Egan.

In Mississippi, with 1,454 of 2,070 precincts reporting, Allain had 278,416 votes, or 54.8 percent, compared to 200,704, or 39.7 percent for Bramlett.

In the nation's capital, Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt said the election "brought good news" for the party "particularly in the South, which will be crucial to our presidential and senatorial hopes in 1984."

Congressional panel concludes Grenada invasion justified

By DON PHILLIPS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Thomas O'Neill said Tuesday a fact-finding delegation he sent to Grenada concluded the U.S. invasion was justified to protect American lives and he accepts its findings.

"The overwhelming consensus of the members of the delegation was that a real potential threat to the American citizens existed in Grenada," O'Neill said in a statement shortly after meeting with the 14-member congressional delegation. "Since this was the case, I believe that sending American forces into combat was justified under these particular circumstances."

O'Neill said the administration's failure to consult Congress before the invasion and refusal to allow news coverage made the fact-finding trip necessary. He said he hopes U.S. troops can come home as soon as possible.

O'Neill's statement came shortly after Rep. Thomas Foley, D-Wash., told reporters of the group's decision, but warned it should not be viewed as blanket approval of intervention anywhere in the world.

Foley said the situation in Grenada is "unique" and it would be a mistake to view the panel's report as sanction for the administration "to put down any Cuban-oriented government of any character."

The delegation returned Monday night after two days on Grenada and a day on Barbados, holding meetings with officials, business and church leaders and hundreds of Grenadian citizens who backed the invasion.

O'Neill also stressed, "Non-intervention in another nation's affairs is the fundamental basis for the preservation of peace in the world," and "Sending American troops into combat is therefore the most serious action that our country can take."

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., ranking GOP member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and a delegation member, said he was pleased O'Neill had come to the conclusion Republicans already held. "That's wonderful; I'm just delighted."

Foley, after a two-hour meeting with O'Neill, praised U.S. military and consular officials in the area and said the United States now must move to provide economic aid, including use of Peace Corps volunteers on the island and help in completing the airport at Point Salines that was being built by Cubans.

The only holdouts on the 14-member committee apparently were Reps. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., and Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, who refused comment following the meeting.

Foley said the group found the U.S. military did an outstanding job, even taking greater casualties itself to protect Grenadian citizens.

Arafat loyalists surrounded at Tripoli

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Pounded by tanks and artillery, supporters of Yasser Arafat retreated Tuesday from their last Lebanese base and streamed into the port city of Tripoli for a final stand against Palestinian rebels. Unconfirmed reports said Arafat fled Lebanon.

Lebanese police estimated more than 100 people had been killed and at least 300 wounded in the six-day rebel assault that drove Arafat and most of his 5,000 fighters from two refugee camps north of Tripoli.

"The rebels looked really wild, like savages" said one person who saw rebels at a roadblock north of the city drag a man from a car, stab him then shoot him.

The right-wing Voice of Lebanon radio said Palestine Liberation Organization chief Arafat fled Tripoli by helicopter to an unidentified ship offshore. Other reports said the helicopter was French, but a naval spokesman in Paris denied the claim.

The pro-Arafat Palestine News Agency in Cyprus also denied the report and called the rebel attacks "savage fascist shelling."

Reporters said the last time they saw Arafat was Tuesday morning after he met with civic leaders in Tripoli and "agreed to accept any decision to save this beloved city."

Dozens of rebel-fired shells slammed into the heart of the city, 45 miles north of Beirut, and more firepower crumbled resistance at the nearby Beddawi refugee camp, Arafat's sole headquarters in Lebanon.

Convoys of Arafat fighters streamed into Tripoli hauling rocket-launchers, mortars and artillery to the port and residential areas, raising fears of full-scale fighting in the densely populated city.

A Lebanese-registered cargo ship was shelled and destroyed in the harbor and an oil refinery that was hit the first day of the rebel assault continued to burn.

"It is a matter of time before we capture Beddawi," said a Damascus spokesman for Col. Said Moussa, who launched a mutiny in May against Arafat over what the rebels claim is a too moderate policy toward Israel.

Damascus radio quoted the rebels as vowing to push through Beddawi and into the streets of Tripoli "in order to rid the people of Tripoli of the chaos brought on by Arafat's gang."

Damascus radio also said President Hafez Assad agreed to meet a five-member delegation of the Gulf Cooperation Council seeking to mediate the dispute.

President off on trip to shore up world peace

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — Describing himself as a messenger for "peace and prosperity," President Reagan began his Asian visit Tuesday to strengthen ties with Japan and South Korea and his own image as a world leader.

Poised at the Alaskan gateway to the Far East, Reagan said the 49th state is "part of an economic community on the Pacific rim which will be ever more important to our way of life in the years ahead."

"My visit to Japan and Korea will, I hope, underline the significance we place on our ties with northeast Asia and the countries of the Pacific," Reagan told a cheering crowd at Elmendorf Air Force Base.

"In the 21st century, we can foresee vastly expanding economic, political and cultural bonds with these countries," he said. "I believe we will witness a wave of productivity and creative endeavors improving the quality of life on both sides of the Pacific."

Air Force One landed in snowy Alaska for refueling enroute to Tokyo, where discussion of trade and security issues — sources of friction glossed over with displays of goodwill — awaited the president.

The Asian trip will also be accompanied by extraordinary security measures because of a recent wave of violence and heightened tensions in the region.

In his first official visit, however brief, to Alaska, Reagan praised the state's residents as "conquerors of the last frontier" and said Alaska was "a treasure house of resources vital to our economy and to the well-being of every American."

Reagan, accompanied by first lady Nancy Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz, addressed 7,500 military personnel and their families at his Anchorage stop outlining the main themes that will dominate his Asian trip.

"Peace is essential if we are to realize our economic potential. And to maintain peace we must maintain a strong defense," he said.

Reagan also said Alaska's status as "a first line of defense .. is becoming every more apparent in the wake of the Soviets' brutal downing" of a Korean jetliner Sept. 1.

Air Force One's route to Tokyo is expected to run to parallel the course taken by the ill-fated Korean Airlines Flight 007, staying well outside Soviet airspace.

Jet crashes, 150 perish

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — An Angolan Boeing 737 airliner carrying about 150 people crashed shortly after takeoff in the African nation Tuesday, killing everyone on board, the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug said.

The twin-engined TAAG airlines jet was leaving the provincial capital of Lubango on a flight to the Angolan capital of Luanda when the crash occurred.

"In this catastrophe there were no survivors," Tanjug quoted officials at the Luanda Airport control tower as saying.

Luther reminds us of power of thought

Every high school student who has ever had a course in world history should know the general outline of how the modern world evolved over several centuries from the Medieval Ages, propelled by the forces of objective science, literacy, education, economic development and Protestantism.

Many can also name the period's great thinkers: Newton, Galileo, Adam Smith. But one man's contribution was perhaps immeasurable: Martin Luther.

It was he who challenged the absolute authority of the Catholic Church by denouncing the shameless sale of religious indulgences and thus breaking Rome's tight hold on the flow of revenue. The effect was to declare the ability of man to pray to God without the intermediary of the church.

But most importantly, he created the intellectual soil in which rational thought flourished. His ideas brought about new definitions of human beings: people of free will; disposed to individual pursuits of economic and social well-being; responsible for their own actions.

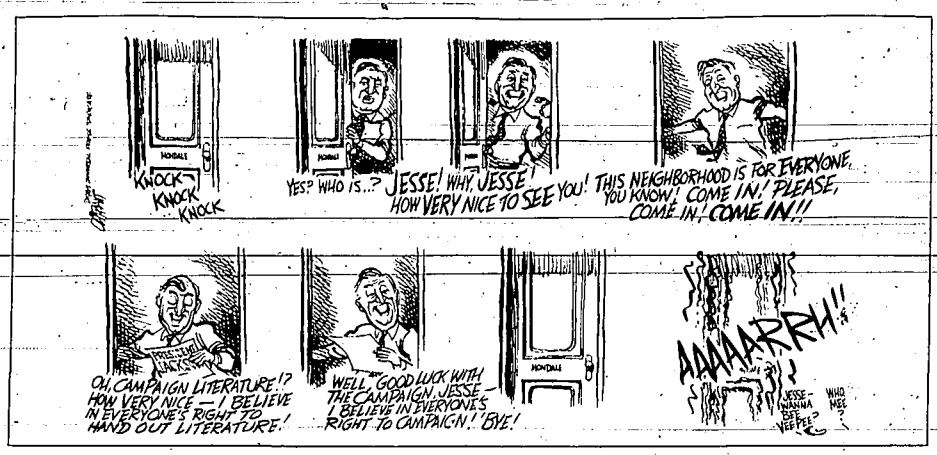
Yet, most of us know less about Luther the man, who was born on Nov. 10, 1483, 500 years ago this week in what is now the village of Eisleben, East Germany. He was one of the leading classicist scholars of his day, a translator, linguist, and prolific author, as well as a theologian.

But of course, he is best known for his dramatic act in 1517 when he posted his 95 theses to the church door in Wittenberg after becoming angered over the church's sale of indulgences.

He was labeled a dangerous heretic but artfully dodged church authorities and lived to see his views widely disseminated across all of Europe.

His thoughts spawned several Protestant faiths, established several "Lutheran" nations in Scandanavia and spread to the New World with the waves of immigrants, where congregations can be found in thousands of American towns and cities.

It is easy for us to think of great social movements in abstract terms. The anniversary of Luther's birth this week should remind us of the power of the human mind to transform the world.



Break out of the closet with a story

Charles Levendosky

Storytellers are born, not made. We were all born storytellers. But we lose the ability, if it isn't encouraged.

Children weave tales naturally and easily if given the opportunity. And they delight in listening to stories of fantasy. Children are natural mythmakers.

I lived in a duplex in the tropics many years ago. The neighbors were a single parent and her six-year-old son. The boy would often play on the front steps; will all the windows open to catch small cool breezes, his voice joined the invited air.

I remember hearing his explanation, spoken aloud to himself, of the birth of a chicken, how the hen swallowed a tiny egg which a cock placed in her beak. How the egg grew, until her stomach was full and "she went to the 'bathroom' to lay the egg."

Here is the essence of mythology. A tale of origins of birth. An explanation to make the world understandable.

When my brother and I were boys, my father often told stories after dinner when we sat in the living room together. There was no television to distract us from this human interaction. Stories evolved in the telling. He would begin with the most fantastic premises, sometimes embellishing fairytales. His Goldilocks had a long nose with a wart on the end. He usually wove two boys into the tales, too. Thereby we became part of the myth; the myth became part of us. My brother and I listened with rapt attention. When the story ended we begged for another.

These stories added a new dimension to the world. They imbued the world with a sense of wonder, of awe, even. The world was not flat and uninspired, but had marvelous possibilities.

Within that tradition, I fathered a spirit of the "improbable possible" in my interactions with my own children. Lying next to them before they went to sleep each night, I would conjure a story. Weave a tale from the barest hint of a thread. After ten years of writing mostly poetry, I suddenly discovered that I could create a story anytime. By expecting to. By the appreciation of my special small audience. I relearned to be a storyteller.

We are all storytellers. It is the nature of humankind. From shaman to priest, from scientist to novelist, we endow the world with meaning beyond the ordinary and observable.

If a hunter was struck by lightning, a shaman might look for the reason that hunter was struck. Not the scientific explanation of why lightning strikes high points, but the reason it struck that particular man. Obviously, someone cast a spell. The world takes on another dimension, the magical. The world is made multidimensional. Invested with meaning beyond itself. Enriched.

So, the theologian might explain a burning bush, or the parting of waters, pointing to Divine influence. While again the scientist might look to a different explanation, a different force. It is not a question of who is "right," it is a question of mythologies which answer some inner need. It is a question of depth and levels of meanings.

What would romance be without endowing a memorable significance to a look, a wink, a tone of voice? Isn't one of the reasons that love is so treasured, is its ability to transform the world into deeper significances? Pity the poor pragmatist for whom the world is only the observable consequences of particular actions. "What you see is what you get."

But you must work to keep the romantic alive. The edge will become dull without a whetstone of secret meanings to sharpen against. Storytellers may lose the thread they might have followed into an enchanted forest.

I don't watch television much anymore. Frankly, it was addictive until I discovered that I could figure out the endings and the details, much to the chagrin of my daughters. I was accused of having seen the shows before. But most of those shows are one-dimensional and lack any sence of wonder or surprise. Most of them are tiresome to watch once, without subjecting oneself a second time.

I have given television up. I consider it an opiate, an electronic tranquilizer.

I am not speaking of those once or twice a season specials, but of most television programming. It is dull and formula and has lost the magic of the storyteller, the surprise that the storyteller and the listener have when the ending of a story evolves, from the teller to the audience.

It is frightening to think that according to Peggy Charren and Martin Sandler's book, "Changing Channels: Living (Sensibly) with Television," published this year, American children on the average, watch 26 hours of television a week.

About the same number of hours they spend in the classroom. Think of the results of spending that time learning dance, or perfecting a swim stroke, or practicing any musical instrument.

We alert citizens to the addiction to drugs and alcohol, but we forget this electronic opium. It lulls us. It puts us to sleep. It suffocates the mythmaker in each of us. But even more devastatingly, it isolates us into a one-to-one interaction with an electronic eye, and walls us off from family interaction.

When you juxtapose the statistics about hours of television watching and family intereaction, a sad picture emerges. A sad picture of children and parents locked in their own separate, narrow closets, lit by the flashing glow of a television set. Silent. Passive. Losing their sense of family, of connection, of the meaning of connecting to the world through their natural ability to creat personal mythologies.

Perhaps it is time to give up an hour of television each day, to spend it talking to one another and listening and, perhaps, when the day hasn't been too interesting, making up a story.

Letters/ Film offensive to American traditions, Christian ideals

Tolerance shades all faiths

This week, a Twin Falls church showed a movie which bitterly derided and attacked the beliefs and practices of another religion. On one side of the movie screen stood a cross; on the other, the American flag: a sadly ironic frame for a film brutally offensive not only to the traditions of the American Republic, but to the basic ideals of Christianity.

Can this really be Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1983 -- not Nauvoo, not Nuremberg, not Ulster, not Cyprus, not Lebanon, not the Punjab?

Freedom and tolerance are the two great pillars which support the American Republic. These are the two immortal ideas which Thomas Jefferson carved on the rock of his grave.

Yet, tolerance does not come easily to mankind. A short reading of history, or of the morning newspaper, suggests that intolerance and factional strife are the natural state of man. But in spite of the daily horrors of Belfast or Beirut, we must remember that the citizens of these cities are not wicked nor evil people. On the contrary, they are very, very ordinary people, no better or worse than we. But we inherited something that they did not: a tradition of religious tolerance. If anything, they have institutionalized intolerance; and the ordinary citizen there is condemned by his heritage to march forward day by day re-enacting the cruelties of the Crusades or of the Battle of the Boyne.

Our tradition of religious tolerance in America is like a great oak which shades men of all faiths. No man now living can claim credit for the present size and strength of this tree; yet if our generation fails to water and nourish this tree, it could wither and die in our time.

As for the cross: surely a basic message of Christianity is that one should teach and persuade others by the strength of one's own faith, by kindness, and by good example, and that one should not revile and criticize the faith and beliefs of others. After all, religious intolerance is as old as time, and the ancients had a quick way to deal with preachers of unpopular doctrines: they nailed them up. These self-appointed critics of another's faith: are they not merely mingling their smug, self-righteous voices with the shouts of Pontius Pilate and the screams of the angry mob?

Arts community offers view

Dear Mr. Eschenburg:

To promise the board that no more of the organization's equipment would "mysteriously disappear" is certainly the only stance to take as director of the Y.F.C.A. Your position must definitely demands that you insure the organization "is properly administering the use of the Y's possessions." It is refreshing to learn of service providers who truly intend to serve. Despite your admirable intentions, this community member fails to see how returning the Mason and Hamblin grand piano to its humid place of honor under the watchful eye of a fully-armed receptionist will "enhance its availibility to the community."

As professionals providing a service, we are more than aware it is the community-at-large who dictates the spectrum of services which are needed, and therefore, will be utilized.

It seems not long ago the fate of your organization was in the hands of the Magic Valley community. The YFCA's tenuous position was not the result of anyone's efforts "to squash" a valuable community center. Still, more than a fair share in the open market, you pleaded for and received widespread community support.

Without accusing you of intent "to squash" the Renaissance Academy, the performing arts community and its patrons are attempting to provide you and your organization invaluable input regarding program design.

Program design is in the hands of the community; not to be regulated by the sense of responsibility nor the "campaign promises" of its directors.

Seeks action to help ducks

This time I would like a little more action from anybody who visits or has ever visited the ducks and geese at Sunset Memorial Park. The last letter I wrote told of my last visit to the park. At that visit I took with me a scale for weighing birds. There was a white pekin duck loose, so I weighed her. This poor duck weighed between three and four pounds. This negligence has deprived this duck of three to four pounds, which is the weight of a "healthy" duck of her breed.

I collected seven names on a petition to take to the city council. Unfortunately, I never made time to see the council.

But this time I have set aside some time to see that this is taken care of. I do not want to see the ducks taken away from the park. I just want the caretakers of the park to feed and shelter them. If it comes down to it that they must be taken away completely, it will be better for the ducks.

Again I must say I do not personally feel responsible for the feeding, since I have my own birds to worry about.

These ducks and geese are going to waste away, slowly but surely, if something is not done soon.

I will take another petition that will go to the city council. If anyone would like their name on it, please call me at 734-0288 between 4:30 and 9 p.m. any day.

I would also like to add some information about the deer that used to be there. It was learned that the American Society for the Protection of Cruelty to Animals took the deer away for improper feeding of the deer. This may tell you about some of the (true) people we have living the this wonderful country.

Time for some to wake up

I am taking the liberty of changing the President's name to Ronald Churchill Reagan. I hope he won't object. Thank God we have a Churchill leading us in these difficult and dangerous times, instead of a Chamberlain.

It's about time that the pacifists and the peaceniks wake up to what is going on in the real world, and yes, even those who believe that any problem can be solved by negotiating.

More ridicule than reason

In reading the letter of R.G. Chrisman this morning I found an attitude similar to that expressed on the CNN TV program the other night when a poll was being taken regarding President Reagan's action in Grenada. Support for the President was running about 9 to 1 when a lady from California came out in opposition. Although I disagreed with her stand, I support her right to express it. However, what would have turned me off in any case was the preface to her argument that the United States was wrong in taking any action at all. She began by saying: "Well, among those of us who know about these things . . ." The general gist of her comment contigued along that line. I almost felt that we of her obviously inferior listening audience should be on our knees before such a superior being.

In reading Chrisman's comments, do I detect the same arrogance? His words seem more aimed at ridicule than reason. Perhaps he is confusing education and vocabulary with intelligence. They don't necessarily go neck and neck.

In classifying those who opposed Frank Church as "red-neck, Bible-thumping fundamentalists operating out of the southeastern U.S., a group best known for its ability to reach a segment of the electorate not famous for complex thought," he must not have a very high opinion of the majority of Idahoans -- since it took a majority vote to defeat Church. The red-neck, Bible-thump part ought to be permanently placed in the garbage -- along with that other much overused, overworked phrase -- "knee jerk" -- this or that, which is so popular in some vocabularies.

Tell me sir, how did Frank Church manage to confer the ownership of the Panama Canal on Panama when it did not belong to Panama originally? Perhaps you regard Church's influence as just an amendment of a rental agreement resulting in a bail-out of U.S. banking interests as just a matter of business, but I don't think the majority of voters did. But then, as you say, what else is new? I presume the fact that Senator Church found it more in his interests to live and work among the North East coast liberal establishment does not affect you like the South East conservative coalition does. Most of his supporters thought that after all the campaign rhetoric was over he would never think of moving East.

When I read the last sentence of the letter in question I would ask Mr. Chrisman what is almost perverse in cloaking one in the conservative mantle? Does he feel that liberals insist, almost perversely, it seems, on cloaking themselves in the liberal mantle?

The rest of the letter, being simply a smear, does not need comment. We naive peons are tired of catch phrase and innuendo. And while you are at it Mr. Chrisman, go to any good dictionary and check out the word "smug."

Can reverse U.S. policy

Watching the Reagan Administration foreign policy develop reminds me of the way our government used to approach range and forest fires. Rather than let the fire act as nature intended, to cleanse the forest and range lands, we stopped the fires; often with the result that large amounts of fuel accumulated with the result, that fires were often more intense and harder and more costly to fight. You'd combine that fire fighting policy with some public ineptness as to the type and location of structure and you'd have a disaster.

Our foreign policy has been much the same -- we prop up some governments where the few oppress the many (usually because it is of economic advantage to us) and when the oppressed rise up as they inevitably and rightly do; we're stuck in a position of fighting on the wrong side. Rather than drawing these liberation movements away from the Marxists, we drive them to 'em. The end results we see time and again.

We handle much of our domestic and environmental policy with the same old ostrich approach -- head stuck firmly in the sand. The results again are costly and unnecessary suffering. Do we have to keep butting our heads against the wall, or can we not look up, open our eyes and walk through the door.

The prices we, the people, keep paying for visionless leadership is inexcusable. I don't believe we had to get to the point we did in Lebanon, El Salvador, Nicaragua or even Grenada. I'm not a Marxist sympathizer. I have as much animosity for the greed and power hunger of the communists as I do for that of the capitalist or any other group that desires to exploit other people or the beauty of this planet. I love this country, this land and I believe that our vision and that of the other peoples of this world will best be served by foreign and domestic policy based on the high principles of fairness, justice and spirituality; not on power lust and self-indulgence.

We'll be facing elections soon; it's an opportunity to find, become and support candidates of vision, that can see beyond the end of their noses. We can't hide from the mess we've created, but we can with the grace of God turn it around. Look into a child's eyes and see if it is worth it.

Another sickness symptom

Yes Lisa, unfortunately we as human beings find it far easier and more convenient to justify abortion-on-demand than to accept the consequences of our immoral and selfish actions. The legalization of abortion some ten years ago is just another symptom of our sick American society. But legalizing the killing of the unborn does not make it right even though some people are ignorant enough to believe that the Holy Bible condones it.

The women's lib movement would have us believe that abortion is a woman's right to do what she wants with her own body. Yet, modern medicine has proved that a baby is not a part of its mother's body but a distinct and separate entity which merely draws nourishment and oxygen from its parent.

As for those who cry for a woman's right not to carry an unwanted pregnancy, I say that the one they are really defending is the man involved. Abortion is in fact most beneficial to the man, in all reality, in that he will be released of all responsibility and mental anguish. What easier way to slither out from under his duties and carry on with business as usual, leaving the woman to deal with the harsh reality of her (their) actions.

That is why it is so very important that we be totally informed about abortion and its mental and physical side effects.

It is not the simple answer to unwanted pregnancy that people believe it is.

Thank God the Idaho Legislature was wise and caring enough to pass the Informed Consent bill last summer which insures that any woman contemplating abortion be informed of the prodecure to be used, the stage of development her baby has reached and the after effects she can and will suffer. Some women never recover from the emotional and physical abuse sustained from a hasty decision made at the prodding of a male companion and/or so-called friends.

Since that fateful day in 1973, when the Supreme Court legalized the killing of unborn babies at any stage of gestation up to the moment of onset of labor, 12 million unborn lives have been terminated, (their tiny bodies torn limb from limb or charred crimson red engulfed in the fire of concentrated saline) and 1.5 million more deaths are expected annually. If anyone cares to argue the fact that the unborn is indeed human, first consider these facts:

The human fetus is not merly a glob of protoplasm as many uninformed people think. Actually, upon implementation in the uterine wall, (at the age of about three days) the tiny human has already begun to take form and just 56 days after conception, (before most women realize that they are pregnant) the body is completely functioning, all systems intact. At nine to 12 weeks of age the baby squints its eyes, swallows, sucks its thumb and moves its arms and legs.

Recently, medicine has made it possible to do surgery on an unborn child to correct potentially disabling or life-threatening conditions. Yet some doctors are the biggest foes of the pro-life movement. The Idaho Medical Association, for instance, was opposed to the passage of the Informed Consent bill and vigorously attempted to impede its passage contending that this piece of legislation would harm their doctor-patient relationship.

Granted, doctors are forced to make life and death decisions every day in surgical and accidental trauma cases, but it seems that we have come into an age where the Hippocratic tradition of preserving life deals proportionally to life's equal value in cold death.

Elected board is preferable

I see by the papers that the controversy over the Gooding County Hospital is getting worse. I have advocated for a long time an elected board. The current board is a "clique." Nice people all, but still an appointed board. They do not and I repeat do not reflect the wishes or thinking of the taxpayers in Gooding County. Anytime you have an appointed board, for anything, it is a controlled group. There are only board members of like thinking appointed. This is a county hospital and as such taxes go to help pay expenses. I would like to see a petition out to make this an elected board. And while there is an investigation going on have them investigate harassment of some doctors and special privileges to others.

Meddling violates '80 pledge

WASHINGTON — Was it not candidate Ronald Reagan who, time after time, promised to get big government off the backs of the American people?

Memory may fade, but not on this one. The Republican platform on which he ran said, "Properly informed, our people as individuals or acting through instruments of popular consultation can make the right decisions affecting personal or general welfare, free of pervasive and heavy-handed intrusion by the central government into the decision-making process."

On the issue of health care, that same document sounded a clear, simple call: "What ails American medicine is government meddling ..."

On the proper respective roles of the state governments and the federal government, the platform did not fudge. After reaffirming its traditional belief that "the best government is the one closest to the people," it met the issue head on: "We pledge to continue to redouble our efforts to return power to the state and local governments."

In the tragic case of Baby Jane Doe, the administration has violated every one of those principles.

It is impossible to conceive of the shock, despair and horror confronted by young parents who are advised that the baby they so eagerly anticipated has been born less than whole.

In an agonizing situation to which all of the easy answers are wrong, the question remains, "Who shall decide?" Again, it is impossible to generalize.

Those who feel that the intervention of the federal government in the case of Baby Jane Doe is inconceivably cruel to parents already in despair would feel differently about the intervention of some level of government in the case of parents who refused to permit surgery on an otherwise healthy child with a ruptured appendix.

The case has been thoroughly and finally decided by the state of New York. Both the Appellate Division and the state's highest court said the lower court was wrong.

Only after the government closest to the people had acted did the federal government intervene. It now sues in the federal court for the medical records of the child. Big Brother says, "I shall decide."

While the issue will be argued as a matter of law, it is at least as much a matter of religion and of politics.

The wisest of judges will not decide more wisely than have the doctors with whom the parents have consulted and the holiest of judges will not be more moral than the clergy with whom the parents have consulted.

None of these individuals, parents, doctors, clergy or judges is infallible. If these individuals are to err, they must err on the side of giving a less than whole baby a fair chance at a less than whole life. This, however, has already been agonized over. Parental love may not be a stronger instinct than governmental self-righteousness, but it is a purer one.

If the government is to err, it should err on the side of non-intervention. This is one instance in which the administration should get its heavy hand off the back, the heart, and the pocketbook of grieving parents and honor the principles to which it has pledged.

Otis Pike, a former congressman, writes for Newhouse News Service.

Surprise House vote kills spending bill

By ROBERT MACKAY
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Democratic-dominated House Tuesday night surprisingly defeated 206-203 a stopgap spending bill needed to keep many federal agencies operating past midnight Thursday.

At least 67 Democrats joined 139 of the Republicans in voting against the "continuing resolution."

"The freshmen are playing it cute," House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass., said afterward. "They don't want to spend more money, so they're not going to. They want to show the people back home they sincerely want to cut the budget.

"I know that on Thursday night, when we stop the government, we're going to pass a bill," O'Neill said.

House Appropriations Committee Chairman Jaime Whitten, D-Miss., will send the House a "clean" continuing resolution Wednesday so it can try to pass one again, O'Neill said.

However, there were some indications the freshmen Democrats wanted to vote first on a tax increase bill before approving a stopgap spending bill for the government.

The final vote was a shock. Only minutes beforehand, the House defeated 244-166 a Republican move to strip all amendments off the resolution and to approve a "clean" stopgap spending bill.

The Senate was expected to begin debate of a similar measure Wednesday.

Before killing the resolution, the House, in a series of votes, attached to the bill a rider restoring some $1 billion to education, school lunch and other social-welfare programs that Congress had cut over the past two years under pressure from President Reagan.

The House also approved, 262-150, an $11.3 billion foreign aid rider that would increase U.S. military and economic assistance to Israel and Egypt.

Snow hits Rockies

By United Press International

The season's first major snowstorm broke out of the western mountains Tuesday and headed for the Plains. Rescuers airlifted a dozen stranded hikers out of a Washington mountain range buried under 4 feet of snow.

The mountain snows rolled out of a storm system centered over northern Colorado and pounced upon Wyoming. Ten inches of snow blanketed Casper by early morning with more still coming down.

"It's still brewing," said Nolan Duke of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center. "They've got winter storm warnings for Casper and eastwards to the South Dakota line and travelers advisories all the way from southeast Wyoming into the Black Hills of South Dakota and into Montana."

Duke said the storm was the first major one of the season.

Twelve hikers stranded since the weekend were rescued by private helicopter when the snowfall eased over the Cascade Mountains near Washington's Lake Chelan.

The hikers — nine teenagers in a state program for troubled youths and three adults — were spotted Monday and helicopters dropped them food. All were reported in good condition.

Lander, Wyo., measured a half foot of snow. There was almost a half foot on higher elevations in Utah and up to 8 inches were forecast for Colorado.

More snow was falling in Idaho and spreading into the Black Hills.

Travelers' advisories, stockmen's advisories and winter storm watches went out from the Rockies through Kansas and Nebraska and into parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Strangler found guilty

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Angelo Buono Jr. was convicted Tuesday of killing two schoolgirls, the youngest victims in the string of 10 Hillside Strangler sex slayings, and a teenage prostitute, bringing to five his convictions in the case.

The Superior Court jury deciding the longest criminal trial in U.S. history found Buono, 50, guilty of strangling Dolores Cepeda, 12, and Sonja Johnson, 14, early in its 16th day of deliberations. Several hours later the panel found Buono guilty of killing Kimberly Martin, an 18-year-old prostitute.

The bodies of the schoolgirls, who were the fifth and sixth victims in the string of slayings in the winter of 1977-78, were found together Nov. 20, 1977, near Dodger Stadium.

Publisher shouts out obscenities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Hustler magazine Publisher Larry Flynt, denied a chance to argue before the Supreme Court, let loose a string of obscenities at the nine justices Tuesday and was arrested.

Under orders from Chief Justice Warren Burger, Flynt was rolled out of the court in his wheelchair and arrested. Flynt was later freed without having to post bail on condition he steer clear of the Supreme Court.

His lawyer said the publisher would be willing to write a letter of apology to the justices.

Flynt used an obscene expletive in complaining that the Supreme Court improperly refused to allow him to present his own arguments in a libel case against him.

The court appointed a Chicago lawyer, Stephen Shapiro, to argue for Flynt in an $80 million libel case involving an executive of rival girlie magazine Penthouse.

Flynt, 40, a paraplegic from a 1978 Georgia murder attempt, sat in his wheelchair at the back of the marble and mahogany courtroom as Shapiro argued the case and was peppered by hostile questions from justices.

The publisher clutched a King James Bible and wore a white jacket that hid a black T-shirt emblazoned with the words: "F— the court."

When arguments ended, the angry publisher bellowed at the court, using sexually explicit language in deriding the justices he said denied him proper representation.

Judge orders paraquat rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- A judge approved an agreement Tuesday prohibiting the federal government from spraying the herbicide paraquat on illegal marijuana plots in the national forests until it conducts an environmental impact study.

U.S. District Judge June Green approved the agreement between the government and the Sierra Club and the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Law, which followed suit to stop the government's spraying program.

Under the agreement, the government will conduct a study to determine the environmental impact of using the spray on illegally planted marijuana fields in the nation's forests.

Robert Feldkamp, a spokesman for the Drug Enforcement Administration, said the action will not stop the federal government from continuing its program to eradicate marijuana on national lands.

Although the government will not spray paraquat, "it will very aggressively go after" marijuana on the ground, cutting an burning the plants, Feldkamp said.

EPA says firm to blame for violations

BOISE (UPI) — Envirosafe Services of Idaho is responsible for illegally burying liquids in some of the 500 barrels that were removed from one of the firm's disposal trenches near Grand View, a federal official said Tuesday.

Steve Provant, Environmental Protection Agency air and hazardous waste team leader, also said officials suspect a second trench at the Owyhee County site contains barrels of liquid chemicals in violation of federal regulations.

He said EPA officials have not decided whether to take action against ESI for failing to properly solidify shipments by mixing peat moss into the barrels of fluid.

The firm has been prohibited from burying liquid chemicals since a federal ban was imposed across the nation in the summer of 1981, Provant said.

Provant said about 20 percent of the 500 barrels unearthed so far contain fluids, ranging from small amounts to "completely liquid" containers.

"We have found improperly solidified materials," Provant said.

Federal law allows a fine of $25,000 for each day a violation occurs.

Provant said EPA believes companies that shipped the waste also may be to blame for inaccurately labeling barrels of liquid waste as solid. ESI is not required to check the contents of sealed barrels marked as solid waste and suitable for burial, he added.

Suspicion about a second trench at the site was raised Tuesday by Owyhee County Prosecutor Clayton Andersen, who said a former dump employee claimed to have witnessed the burial of fluids in the filled trench.

The fired worker, Mike Spickelmier, prompted the current federal investigation into burial practices when he described illegal disposals in the trench at the 117-acre site.

Provant said EPA has had its own suspicions about the filled trench because ESI used it for disposal after the federal ban on liquids.

South Carolina lobbies for reactor

AIKEN, S.C. (UPI) — South Carolina Gov. Dick Riley and other state officials told Energy Secretary Donald Hodel in no uncertain terms Tuesday they want a new Defense Department nuclear reactor built in South Carolina — not Idaho.

Energy Department officials said earlier this year a new reactor is needed to help increase the nation's production of material for atomic weapons. Three reactors already produce such materials at the Savannah River Plant, and a fourth reactor at the plant is scheduled to go into operation early next year.

Government officials have said the new reactor probably will be located in Idaho. But Sen. Strom Thurmond and other officials are trying to convince Hodel to put the reactor at the Savannah Plant because personnel, security systems and other necessary facilities already are in place there.

Hodel visited the top-secret plant near the South Carolina-Georgia border for groundbreaking ceremonies for a $910 million facility to process high-level nulcear waste into a safe form for permanent disposal.

In remarks following a luncheon at the construction site, Riley — calling on "anyone who will listen" — told guests and dignitaries the new reactor should be built in South Carolina.

Study shows big Syrian troop buildup

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli military analysts believe Syria's standing army has nearly doubled in the last two years to 400,000 men and, with new Soviet weapons, could launch a devastating first-strike against Israel.

"We are heavily outnumbered in standing forces," said Maj. Gen. Aharon Yariv, a former chief of Israeli military intelligence. "This is the big danger."

Yariv, runs the Jaffee Center of Strategic Studies at Tel Aviv University. On Monday, it published a 385-page military survey and analysis of every state in the Middle East.

Israel, it said, has a standing army of 172,000 troops, which can be quickly increased to about 550,000 if fully mobilized.

Syria has a standing army of 330,000, as of June. Yariv said that estimate, however, was already out of date and that the Syrian army now numbers between 400,000 and 420,000 soldiers.

The prestigious International Institute of Strategic Studies in London put Syria's armed forces at 227,000, but Yariv said those figures were sharply understated and outdated.

"Ever since Egypt signed the peace treaty and opted out of military confrontation, the Syrian aim has been to reach what they call strategic parity with Israel," Yariv said.

He said the Syrian army includes eight mechanized divisions, at least two armored divisions and 30 independent commando brigades. When fully mobilized, the Syrian armed forces may reach 800,000, including reservists, he said.

Nicaragua guards crop

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The Defense Ministry ordered troops on full alert in the northern province of Nueva Segovia for fear a rebel attack was imminent on the region's vital coffee crop.

The crop is Nicaragua's largest source of foreign exchange and last year brought $140 million in currency to the leftist-led government, even though rebel attacks destroyed 10 percent of that harvest.

Journalists returning from the province said the army command at Quilali, a town of more than 10,000 people 115 miles north of Managua, said he believed 1,200 rebels "will attack any day," one of the reporters said.

Marines turn over outpost to Lebanese army

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Marines withdrew Tuesday from an outpost on the edge of a Shiite Moslem neighborhood that has been used repeatedly as a base of attack on the U.S. peace-keeping contingent, officials said.

Control of the outpost, in a Lebanese University building less than 2 miles from Marine headquarters at Beirut International airport, was turned over to the Lebanese army.

Moslem gunmen based in the adjacent Shiite neighborhood of Hay el Sallom wounded one Marine in a six-hour battle Monday and killed one Marine and wounded five others in a fierce seven-hour firefight three weeks ago.

But Maj. Robert Jordan, the Marine spokesman, said the withdrawal had "nothing to do" with the attacks, but rather eliminated an unnecessary Marine post.

"It has long been planned, and we implemented the move early Tuesday in coordination with the Lebanese army," Jordan said.

"The Marine Alpha Company, consisting of 150-200 men, pulled out of the Lebanese University building early Tuesday. The location has been handed over to the Lebanese army," he said.

Jordan said the Marines had first moved into the Lebanese University building to act as a buffer between the Shiite neighborhoods and the Israeli army, which held much of the region last year.

"The Israelis left the region, and the Marines at the University were no longer playing the buffer role, and thus the post was no longer serving its purpose," he said.

"After negotiating with the Lebanese authorities, it was decided to leave the building," Jordan said.

Salvador denying rumors

By United Press International

Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana went on nationwide radio Tuesday to deny as without "foundation" rebel claims of a coup attempt against him, but the army refused comment and spoke of internal squabbling over the guerrilla war.

Earlier, a clandestine rebel radio station said "the rumor of a coup d'etat headed by Col. Jaime Abdul Gutierrez has been detected by our intelligence services."

Gutierrez headed the 1979 military coup of reformist officers that toppled Carlos Humberto Romero, then president after a election most called rigged by the army.

Government officials said the "coup rumors" originated from within the rebel organization, the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) and its political front, the Democratic Revolutionary Front, or FDR.

Magana denounced the rebel claims in a morning radio speech, saying "the versions do not have any foundation."

The Salvadoran army refused comment on the situation, saying "the only problems we confront internally are in the conduct of the war against subversion. In the past few days small disagreements have come up but (they were) routine and everyone obeys in the interest of combating the penetration of communism into the country."

The army also denied rebel claims it would allow troops from Guatemala and Honduras to come to its aid against the leftist guerrillas.

The FMLN, claiming it knows of U.S. plans for "armed action in El Salvador," also asked the Constituent Assembly to prohibit foreign troops from entering the country.

In Guatemala, chief of state Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia denied Salvadoran rebel claims that 4,000 Guatemalan troops were massed on the Salvadoran border — but he did not rule out possible assistance to neighboring countries in the future.

"We will never mobilize troops toward that sector, and Guatemala will remain neutral as long as possible," Mejia said.

Reports of an intervention by Guatemala and Honduras have arisen in the leftist Nicaraguan government and among leftist guerrillas since those two countries, along with El Salvador, revived the Central American Defense Council, known as CONDECA, on Oct. 1.

Inflation falls in Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexico's inflation rate in October climbed a relatively small 3.3 percent and for all of 1983 may drop as much as 20 percent below the triple-digit figures of last year, the Bank of Mexico said Tuesday.

The October increase brought the annual rate of increase in consumer prices to 63.7 percent.

If inflation can be contained in the last two months of 1983 the annual rate will be 80 percent, or 20 percent less than the 98.8 percent figure registered in 1982, the central bank said.

The central bank said it was a positive signal that the government's anti-inflation campaign is working.

The government said it expected inflation to drop to about 40 percent next year as the country works its way out of the economic crisis.

However, a group of congressmen released a study Monday calculating that at present levels inflation will reach at least 60 percent in 1984.

The Consumer Complaint Bureau, a powerless government agency, said last week new price hikes and burgeoning black market sales of eggs and milk could push the actual inflation rate to 100 percent this year.

Nerve gas money squeaks by Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate agreed by one vote Tuesday to provide funds for nerve gas production for the first time since 1969, with Vice President George Bush once again casting the tie-breaking vote on the controversial issue.

The vote was 47-46 after Bush stepped in. But because the House refused last week to appropriate the money for two controversial new nerve gas weapons, the issue will go to a conference committee that will reconcile the two chambers' military appropriations bills.

The vote by the Republican-led Senate was on an amendment, offered by Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to restore $124 million for the nerve gas program to the Senate's $252.5 billion military bill.

"The Senate being equally divided, the president votes in the affirmative," said Bush, acting in his role as president of the Senate, when the tie vote was announced.

The vote in the hushed chamber was almost a repeat of last July, when Bush cast another tie-breaker that enabled the Senate to authorize nerve gas production, 50-49. The House had rejected the nerve gas program, but a House-Senate conference committee left it in the final bill that was signed by President Reagan.

If the funds were to survive the conference committee, it would set the stage for resuming production of nerve gas for the first time since 1969, when President Nixon banned the production of new lethal chemical weapons.

However, the military authorization bill signed by Reagan last summer imposes several conditions before the weapons could actually be assembled.

U.S.-Soviet talks on banning chemical weapons recessed in 1980 and evidence has been mounting since 1975 of Soviet use of toxic weapons in Laos, Cambodia and Afghanistan.

What's what

Fashion folk say a woman's body is viewed in seven zones: the bust, waist, hips, buttocks, legs, arms and overall length. Fashions have changed to emphasize one or another of these zones. In the 1880s, the big bustle. In 1905, the bust. In 1913, the small waist. In 1920, the legs. In the 1930s, the hips. In the 1940s, the arms and overall length. In the 1950s, the "sweater girl" bust again. Then it all changed. Today, the clothing emphasizes not one, but at least three zones. Bust, buttocks and legs.

STAR

Q. This movie star fathered another movie star, then died at age 14. Name him.
A. Rin-Tin-Tin.

Q. What's the most commonly swallowed item that requires surgical removal?
A. The toothpick.

Q. Has there ever been a month without a full moon?
A. Only one of record. February of 1866.

Q. How much blood do I have in my body?
A. Divide your weight by 12. That's it in pints.

Q. How come it's colder at the South Pole than at the North Pole?
A. Greater elevation.

CORRECT

It's not always best to be correct. "Wapiti" is the correct name for an "elk." See?

Before William Harvey figured blood circulation 369 years ago, people thought their blood washed back and forth like ocean tides.

When he lifts his glass to drink, he looks into the glass. When she lifts her glass to drink, she looks over the rim. Usually, usually. That's another difference between the male and the female.

Am asked how many people were killed in the worst train wreck, and why that disaster is so little known. According to the record, 543 died in Modane, France, on Dec. 12, 1917, when a passenger train derailed. But the world was weary of violent death then — during World War I.

Singer buys Aladdin casino for $55 million

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Singer Wayne Newton bought the Aladdin Hotel-Casino in an estimated $55 million deal that prevents foreclosure of the gambling resort by the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund.

The deal now must be approved by state gambling officials, who will hold hearings and decide whether the entertainer will be granted a gaming license. The decision could come as soon as January.

"All of the papers have been signed," Nevada Gaming Commission Chairman Jim Avance said after the gambling application was filed with the state Monday.

Newton's attorney David Mousel said he hoped the Nevada Gaming Control Board and the Nevada Gaming Commission could vote on the application in January.

The Aladdin Hotel sales agreement calls for Newton to acquire 100 percent of the Aladdin Hotel operating company, N&T Associates.

Details of the sales agreement were not announced but sources said the sales price was an estimated $55 million and that Newton would finance the deal with a $70 million loan from a California savings and loan consortium payable over three years with a two-year option.

Newton must pay an additional $10 million fee on the loan, sources said.

Former owners of the Aladdin Hotel endorsed the sales agreement last week and will receive about $17 million from the transaction. Papers were forwarded to Newton who signed over the weekend at Lake Tahoe where he currently is appearing. Owner Ed Torres signed final documents Monday.

The sale averted foreclosure of the financially troubled Aladdin Hotel-casino by three groups — the former owners, the Teamsters Central States Pension Fund which holds a $34 million first mortgage on the hotel-casino and Valley Bank which holds a $5.3 million first mortgage on the Aladdin Theater for the Performing Arts.

Newton and Torres, a longtime Nevada gaming figure, purchased the Aladdin Hotel in 1980 for $85 million as 50-50 partners. Torres then bought out Newton's interest in 1982 for $1.6 million cash and a $7 million promissory note. Torres subsequently defaulted on numerous loans.

Lost hikers discovered

HOLDEN VILLAGE, Wash. (UPI) — Twelve hikers lost three days in snowy mountains near Lake Chelan were sighted by a rescue helicopter and reported in good condition.

The helicopter dropped food to nine teenagers from a program for troubled youths and their three leaders but delayed plans to airlift them out of the Ice Lakes basin area until Tuesday.

"They're staying in the mountains. They're apparently all fine," said Jan Giffin, Chelan County Sheriff's Department spokeswoman.

The Chelan County Search and Rescue team took additional supplies into the area, located at 7,500 feet in the north-central part of Chelan County between Mount Carne and Mount Maude, Chelan County Undersheriff Gene Williams said the snow in the area was about four feet deep.

Rescuers had planned to bring the hikers out with the help of pack horses but decided instead to airlift the hikers out of the mountains early Tuesday via helicopter.

Bad weather prevented airlifting the hikers out Monday after they were spotted by the rescue helicopter about noon.

The group of nine youths, aged 16 to 18, was led by Daybreak Expeditions, an organization that contracts with the Department of Social and Health Services to provide wilderness survival training for institutionalized youths.

The group had been missing since Friday.

Correspondents off to war in style

PARIS (UPI) — A Paris firm is selling chic bulletproof clothes for correspondents in war zones.

"Reporters, cameramen, photographers are scattered throughout the hot spots in the world," an advertisement from the Aigle-France clothing firm said. "Their lives are often in danger."

Aigle-France used to make bulletproof jackets only for soldiers and police. Now it sells fashionable hunting jackets, safari suits, blousons or vests with three four-pound bulletproof shields that slide into the garment lining.

Protection levels range from guarding against a .22 caliber bullet to a .357 magnum, the firm claims.

"This adds reassurance without creating a bulky look," an advertisement said.

Prices range from $311 to $622.

Seaman tells of his battle for survival

SEATTLE (UPI) — Robert Ray choked back tears as he told a U.S. Coast Guard board of inquiry about his battle for life in the icy Pacific after the tugboat he was aboard sank, killing eight of his shipmates.

Ray, 33, the chief engineer, barely lived to tell about his ordeal on board the Seattle-based tugboat which capsized and sank amid 40-foot waves and 70-knot winds as it returned home from Anchorage Oct. 27.

Choking back sobs Monday, Ray described how he awoke in midafternoon and heard "everything in my cabin that was not tied down flying across the room."

"The tug was leaning over to starboard at about 50 degrees," he said. "The sea or another wave hit the boat. The tug tried to right itself but was hit by another wave."

That left the deck of the Eagle almost perpendicular to the sea.

When Ray climbed to the wheelhouse and asked the skipper what was going on, the skipper said the ship was sinking.

At the first day of hearings on the mishap, Ray told how he donned a survival suit and heard the first mate yelling to the crew to send a distress message over the radio.

The last word heard from his companions, Ray said, was the second mate sending the radio dispatch, "Mayday, mayday, tug Eagle going down."

Ray became so emotional as he described the ordeal that the proceedings had to be adjourned briefly at one point.

The rear of the Eagle sank first and Ray was forced into the icy seas, he said. His survival suit enabled him to stay alive and remain conscious for two hours until a Coast Guard helicopter spotted him at dusk.

Magic Valley communities elect councils

Hollister

HOLLISTER — It was a contest of write-ins in Hollister, where no one had filed a formal nominating petition prior to Tuesday's voting.

Incumbent John Self, who had omitted filing a petition but welcomed write-in votes, won his seat back with 14 votes.

To fill a second open seat, the voters have called former city clerk and council member C.M. Lanting, 56, back into service.

Lanting, who was on the council about seven years ago, said late Tuesday night that he didn't know if he would accept the voters' draft.

His outspoken questions at a recent city meeting on taxes may have triggered the call, he said.

"They thought, 'He wanted to get the answers. Maybe he ought to be on the council so he can get the answers,'" Lanting said.

He received 12 votes.

Others receiving write-in votes were: Peggy Hamby, 2; Walt Hall, 2; and Dan Brierley, 1.

City clerk Carol Fleenor said 16 of the town's 60 registered voters went to the polls. The new council members will serve two-year terms, she said.

Rupert

RUPERT — It was no surprise who won the City Council elections in Rupert on Tuesday.

The two incumbents, both running for four-year terms, were unopposed.

June Dombeck, a retired bank employee, received 236 votes in her bid for re-election. Clark Cameron, retired from International Harvester, earned 240 votes for another term on council.

According to the city clerk's office, 988 Rupert residents were registered, but only 272 bothered to go to the polls.

Twenty-seven persons received votes as write-in candidates, but none got more than five votes each.

Murtaugh

MURTAUGH — Tuesday's election in Murtaugh was almost a foregone conclusion, as three replacement City Council members easily held on to their posts.

Ruth Matthews, Oscar "Swede" Olson and Robin "Rob" Wright won their first elections, but all three already were serving on the council.

Each had been appointed previously to replace members who resigned while in office.

Matthews and Olson will serve four-year terms. Wright will begin a two-year term, the unexpired portion of the term held by Brian Ward, who resigned in July.

City clerk Jeannine Bennett said 12 of the town's 25 registered voters cast ballots.

Oakley

OAKLEY — By a vote of 64 to 70, Oakley Mayor Ray C. Bedke has lost his job to George F. Trombley.

Bedke, who heads a ranching operation in the Oakley area and in Nevada, had served one term in office. Trombley is a gas-station manager.

In other city races, City Council incumbent Maurice Matthews won his bid for re-election for one of two positions that were open. Housewife Rebecca Clark won the other seat.

According to city clerk Alta Hunter, Matthews received 103 votes, and Clark received 84.

A third candidate, Sid Nelson, a farmer, pulled 57 votes.

Hunter said 131 persons voted out of the 180 who had registered.

There were a few write-in votes, but "they didn't amount to much," Hunter said.

Kimberly

KIMBERLY — Kimberly voters Tuesday handed the mayor's gavel to 35-year-resident Ron Jones by a wide margin in heavy voting.

Jones, 55, defeated 34-year-old Richard Stone, 328 to 191, in the race to succeed Mayor RosaLea Whitehead, who will step down in January.

The two City Council seats up for election went to incumbents Sterling Crothers and Avis Allen, both of whom ran on their records.

Crothers, 53, who has served four years, led with 360 votes, and Allen, who has been a council member for six years, polled 337 votes.

Challenger Thomas Lewis, 34, received 250 ballots.

In his campaign, Jones had relied heavily on his money-management experience as a self-employed businessman. He has owned and operated the Hitchin' Post in Kimbely for the past 15 years. A top priority, Jones said, is finishing the city's north-side water project.

City clerk Edith Widmer said voting was heavy, with 527 of the 693 registered voters going to the polls.

A breakdown in the city's sole voting machine late Tuesday afternoon forced some voters to switch to paper ballots for about 45 minutes, she said.

All the officials elected Tuesday will serve four-year terms. They will take office the second Tuesday in January, Widmer said.

Gooding

GOODING — In Gooding, the incumbents were elected to the two open four-year City Council seats and the mayoral position by healthy margins.

The third council position will be filled by James Muscat.

J.E. "Gene" Heller, a retired Gooding postmaster, will continue as mayor, after receiving 356 votes. His opponent, David Adair, garnered 153 votes.

The election was a replay of four years ago, when Adair also lost to Heller.

In the race for the two four-year council positions, voters elected Robert Moline, a Bureau of Land Management employee, and Harold Reed, an employee of the State School for the Deaf and Blind. This will be the third council term for both.

Residents cast 312 votes for Reed and 310 for Moline. The other two candidates, James Braga and Jack Katen, received 260 and 96 votes, respectively. This was the second time that Katen has been defeated for a council seat.

In Gooding's closest race, Muscat, a retired school superintendent, was elected to a two-year council position with 277 votes. Thomas A. Stevensen received 233.

City clerk Isabelle Cahoon said voter turnout was good, with 523 of the 668 registered voters showing up at the polls.

Minidoka

MINIDOKA — Three men who had their names on the ballot and one write-in candidate were elected Tuesday to the four openings on the Minidoka City Council.

Incumbent Kim Butler, a carpenter, received eight votes in the election. Newcomers Mike Rodiguez, an agricultural worker, received 13, and 12 votes were counted for Dallen Ward, a farmer.

Glenn Fassett won the remaining council seat with seven write-in votes.

Other write-in candidates received no more than five votes each, said city clerk Deon Fassett.

Fassett said 21 of the city's 27 registered voters went to the polls.

Filer

FILER — Wanda Shaffer received 140 votes and Russell "Bud" Sheridan Jr. received 136 votes in the two uncontested City Council races in Filer.

There was one write-in vote for former Councilman Leland Alexander.

A total of 148 votes were cast in the election.

Shaffer is an incumbent member of council, while Sheridan served on the council in the early 1970s.

Both will serve four-year terms.

Declo

DECLO — Two City Council members and the mayor have been re-elected in Declo, all in unopposed contests.

Mayor Jones Leonard, a veteran of several terms in office, received 20 votes. Leonard is a retired service-station operator.

Ross Anderson, who owns and operates the Declo Market, earned 22 votes, and Jim Orthman, the owner of Orthman Service in Declo, received 21 votes for four-year terms on the council.

A total of 23 residents voted out of 54 who were registered.

City clerk Nelda Matthews said there were no write-in candidates.

Acequia

ACEQUIA — Two unopposed Acequia council members earned their seats back in Tuesday's election.

Alvin Castro, a truck driver, received 17 votes, while Harold McCarty, a warehouseman, captured 20.

Out of the 48 registered voters in the community, 21 cast ballots.

"We were amazed we got that good of a turnout when the men were running unopposed," said Mayor Larry Wall.

Two write-in candidates, Curtis Bair and Glen Stephenson, received one vote each.

Hazelton

HAZELTON — More than half the registered voters in Hazelton went to the polls Tuesday to elect two new City Council members who were running unopposed.

Rodney Rudolph, an employee of the Hillsdale Highway District, received 41 votes. Allen White, an employee of the Amalgamated Sugar Co., received 31 votes.

They fill the four-year terms on the council, replacing Rick Erickson and Ray Olson, who did not seek re-election.

City clerk Joan Wolf said 78 persons were registered for the election; 42 voted.

Bliss

BLISS — Thirty-one voters turned out in Bliss on Tuesday to re-elect two incumbents and put one newcomer, all unopposed, on City Council.

Incumbent Fern Cenarrusa received 30 votes, and incumbent Eddie Butler received 29 votes for the two four-year seats that were open.

Doug Andrews received 29 votes for the two-year seat. Charles Scott received one write-in vote.

Cenarrusa will be beginning her third term on the council. Butler won his first elected victory. He was appointed to the council two-and-a-half years ago to fill a vacancy.

Richfield

RICHFIELD — Richfield Mayor Charles Buttcane has been re-elected to office.

He received 132 votes in Tuesday's balloting, to easily defeat challenger Norman Swainston, who earned 29 votes.

For the two City Council positions that were decided, Mary Jane Whitesell received 134 votes, and Frank Johnson received 128.

Both candidates ran unopposed.

There were 185 voters registered, as of Friday's deadline.

Wendell

WENDELL — Both incumbents who were facing election in Wendell have been returned to City Council.

Marshall Howsden received 240 votes, and Lloyd Little received 162, to take back their seats.

The other candidate on the ballot, Sherry Oliver, a correspondent for the Gooding County Leader, got 140 votes.

Three write-in candidates each received one or two votes for the two four-year City Council seats.

Of the 1,003 registered voters, only 289 voted.

Turnout heavy throughout valley

By PAT BEAN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Heavy voting, a rash of write-in votes in a few races, two failed school bond issues, support for the continuation of the 5 percent option tax in Ketchum and Sun Valley and several new mayors marked voting activity in Magic Valley Tuesday.

Among the new mayors for the valley are Thomas Butley, who upset eight-year incumbent Mayor Galen Stimpson in Hansen; and George F. Trombley, who by a vote of 64 to 70, beat out incumbent Oakley Mayor Ray C. Bedke.

Kimberly, whose Mayor RosaLea Whitehead did not file for re-election, elected 35-year-old Ron Jones by a wide margin as its new mayor. Kimberly, by the way, had problems with its sole voting machine and voters had to switch to paper ballots for about 45 minutes during the day.

Harold Hurst, Heyburn's mayor for the past 24 years — the only mayor the city has ever had — beat off challenger Dean Baker to retain his seat.

Write-in votes determined both council seats in Hollister, where no one officially filed for office. Incumbent John Self won his seat back with 14 votes and former city clerk and council member, C. M. Lanting, was elected with 12 votes.

A last minute write-in campaign in Shoshone by Vic Bozzuto won him one of the two council seats.

And in Dietrich, there were eight write-in candidates for a two-year council seat which no candidate had filed for. The write-in winner was John Sabala with 12 votes.

In Ketchum and Sun Valley, where the major issue was the 5 percent option tax on lodging and liquor by the drink, a heavy turnout soundly approved the continuation of the tax.

Local lodge and bar owners had waged a campaign to defeat the tax, and city officials responded with their own campaign in favor of the tax. With its defeat, the opponents say they will continue to press a suit against both cities which claims the tax is unfair.

But if a heavy turnout in Blaine County favored the official stance, the heavy turnout in both Jerome and Castleford school districts did just the opposite. In those two elections, proposed school bond issues went down in defeat.

Elections

Hagerman

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman mayor has lost her job and a write-in candidate won one of the two City Council vacancies.

Merle Owsley, with 114 votes, won the mayor's race over incumbent Karen Yarbrough with 88 votes.

A write-in candidate, Gloria Jazwick, received 91 votes to win one of the two council vacancies.

The other went to a former city clerk, Audrey Hoffman, who captured 139 votes. Defeated City Council candidates included Eunice Holt, with 76 votes, and Dean Smart, with 74.

Several other write-ins were reported in the Tuesday municipal election. Jerry Kepler received nine votes for council, and Bill Wilson got five for mayor.

There were 214 votes cast; 80 percent of those who were registered went to the polls.

Castleford

CASTLEFORD — Mayor Robert Sample polled 33 votes Tuesday, to win re-election over challenger Thomas Wiggs.

Wiggs received six votes.

The two City Council candidates, running unopposed, each received 39 votes.

Mike Nihill was elected to fill the position now held by Orville Brown, who did not seek re-election, and incumbent Beryl Percy was re-elected.

There were 39 votes cast and three spoiled ballots.

All three terms are for four years.

Buhl

BUHL — The recently retired Buhl postmaster, Claude McKercher, and incumbent Terry Lechner were the top vote-getters for the two four-year Buhl City Council seats that were up for election Tuesday.

Out of a turnout of 409 voters, McKercher received 332 votes; Lechener received 267 votes.

The other candidate, Richard Floyd, received 176 votes.

Lechner will be beginning his seventh year on the council.

McKercher retired as postmaster in April.

Eden

EDEN — Despite of a number of write-in votes, Mayor Owen Hammond and City Council candidate Larry Craig were elected Tuesday with no real challenge.

Both were running unopposed.

Hammond received 55 votes; Craig got 60.

A total of 67 votes and one spoiled ballot were cast, according to city clerk Edith Utt.

Melvin Rice, who did not seek re-election and will be succeeded by Craig, received two write-in votes for council, as did Don Utt and Jim Lulow.

Dave Winter and Utt each received one write-in vote for mayor, as did Joe Cooper and Jule LaJuenesse.

There were 111 persons registered for the election.

Jerome

JEROME -- The two incumbent Jerome City Council members have been re-elected.

Jeanne Vandiver, the co-owner of a Jerome real-estate firm, led the balloting, with 402 votes, to return to office for four years.

The other four-year position was won by Henry "Duge" Pharris, who polled 378 votes for his re-election.

Challenger Fred Kiser, a former council member and a long-time city employee made a good showing, with 315 votes, but failed to better the two incumbents.

Only the three candidates had filed for the two council openings.

Paul

PAUL — Mayor Robert Larsen handily won re-election in Paul over challenger Joy Croft.

The turnout for the balloting was heavy.

The 62-year-old Larsen, who is a school psychologist, earned 212 votes for a fourth term as mayor, according to the city clerk's office. Croft, the owner of the Office Lounge, received 87 votes.

Incumbents Gene Hansen, 39, and David Warren, 35, were re-elected to second terms on the City Council, over Ivus Stuart, 40, a beauty-salon owner, and Irvine Moore, 46, a bookkeeper.

Hansen received 165 votes; Warren, 188; Stuart, 111; and Moore, 133.

A total of 304 persons voted out of the 347 that were registered.

Hansen

HANSEN — Challenger Thomas Butler upset eight-year incumbent Galen Stimpson Tuesday to grab the mayor's job in Hansen.

Butler, 38, who has been a volunteer firefighter for the past four years, polled 69 votes to Stimpson's 49, according to unofficial counts.

"I'm known by a great majority of the people over here, so they know what I stand for," Butler said after the victory.

At the council table, long-time resident Henry Mothershead, 66, who has lived in Hansen for 50 years, will assume office, along with newcomer Harry Beaver, 27, who moved to the town just a year ago.

Neither of the two incumbents on council whose terms will expire sought election.

Mothershead lead the balloting with 81 votes. But it was a squeaker for the second council seat. Beaver beat out 33-year-old Robert "Bob" Wayment by a single vote, 65 to 64.

Mayor-elect Butler ran a strong campaign to snare Stimpson's post. He had advocated maintaining services while controlling the city's budget. The city may compete harder for grants during his four-year term, he said.

Butler also said he hopes to see Hansen attract new business and improve the Fire Department and water and sewer services without increasing taxes.

City clerk Darlene Miller said 119 of the 149 registered voters cast ballots.

Shoshone

SHOSHONE — A rash of write-in votes have determined the Shoshone City Council election.

Shoshone businessman Vic Bozzuto staged a last-minute write-in campaign and placed second in the balloting Tuesday, receiving 190 votes to win a four-year council seat.

The top vote-getter was Jerry Baltazor with 217 votes. He also will take a four-year council position.

Chamber of Commerce President Fred McCrea finished just 20 votes behind Bozzuto, at 170 votes. Businesswoman Alberta Fulkerson was a distant fourth, with 43 votes.

There were no incumbents on the ballot.

City clerk Ruth Chess said seven other write-in candidates received votes, all less than 10 each.

Fairfield

FAIRFIELD — Two new councilmen have been elected in Fairfield.

For the four-year council seats, Jerry Roby was the top vote-getter, with 62 votes. The second seat was won by Lin Vanskikes, with 50 votes.

Fred Marlof was third; he received 32 votes.

For the two years remaining on former Councilwoman Carolyn Swartz's term, O.M. Ralph received 78 votes. His opponent, Brenda Laing, got nine votes.

No incumbent council members were on the ballot.

Rueben Miller, who was appointed mayor in February, ran unopposed for that position.

Glenns Ferry

GLENNS FERRY — Larry Rose, a businessman who has been on the Glenns Ferry City Council for four years, and 12-year council veteran Dora Mae Sellers have been returned to office.

Rose received 196 votes, and Sellers, a retired businesswoman, captured 124 votes.

A total of 659 votes were cast in Tuesday's election, with 73 percent of the registered voters going to the polls.

Robert Janousek received 115 votes, James Juker got 120 votes and Wayne R. Owen polled 104 votes in their losing bids for council seats.

Dietrich

DIETRICH — Eight persons received write-in votes Tuesday for the two-year City Council seat open in Dietrich.

John Sabala edged out John Green by one vote to win the seat vacated by the resignation of Carolyn Costello earlier this summer.

No candidates announced for the position prior to the election.

Sabala, who is just finishing a four-year council term, had decided not to seek re-election to that position. Sabala received 12 votes to Green's 11, and will take the two-year seat in January.

Jim Voloshen and Pete Gage ran unopposed for the two four-year seats open on the council.

There were no incumbents on the ballot.

City clerk Iva Lee Green said none of the other six candidates received more than 10 votes.

Sun Valley

SUN VALLEY — Incumbent Joe Humphrey and attorney Tom Praggastis have won the two open Sun Valley City Council seats.

Humphrey received 153 votes, and Praggastis got 137.

The two other candidates were Steve Giaccobi, who got 102 votes, and David Griffith, who had 117 votes.

Both of the elected men will serve four-year terms.

Heyburn

HEYBURN — Harold Hurst has fought back a challenge to his long-time job as mayor of Heyburn.

Hurst won over Dean Baker by a vote of 219 to 164 on Tuesday.

The 60-year-old Hurst, a Minico High School counselor, has been the only mayor that Heyburn has had since it became a city in 1963. Before that he had served as a councilman.

Baker, a 46-year-old Burley High School science teacher and city councilman, had wanted to break the tradition.

In other races, Bessie Hurless, a 61-year-old housewife, received 223 votes to win a two-year City Council seat over Ron Fowler, an employee of Spencer's Office Supply. Fowler had 155 votes.

Councilmen David Mayes, a Cassia Memorial Hospital employee, and Larry McCombs, a manager of a grocery store, were unopposed in their re-election bids for four-year council terms. Mayes gathered 253 votes, and McCombs had 315.

Burley

BURLEY — Newcomer Ken Fronk and two experienced City Council candidates won victories in Burley on Tuesday.

Fronk, a long-time resident, secured one open seat with 692 votes, while incumbent Dale Doman regained his council seat with 574 ballots.

Leonard King, who previously had served on the council but was defeated two years ago, won the third position, with 551 votes.

Hailey

HAILEY — Incumbent Joe Maccarillo was re-elected to the Hailey City Council Tuesday with 357 votes and the two other seats going to Dorothy Moore with 376 votes and Mary Ann Mix, 255.

The incumbent won the two-year term and the two women earned four-year terms open in the Tuesday election.

Defeated candidates were Chuck Halley and Bill Torney for the two-year seat and Jack Holmes, with 230 votes and Mary Decker, 126 votes for the two four-year seats.

Ketchum

KETCHUM — All three incumbent candidates in the Ketchum mayor and city council races were re-elected Tuesday.

Mayor Jerry Seiffert received 497 votes, defeating a write-in challenger, Royce Milasky, who polled 92 votes.

In the council race, incumbents Sue Wolford with 422 votes and Tom Held with 394 votes defeated challenger Rip Sewell, who received 351 votes.

Malta

MALTA -- Three incumbent city officials kept their jobs in Malta after all the votes were counted in Tuesday's election.

Mayor Brent Udy gathered 35 votes in his unopposed race for the city's top position.

Wally Briggs received one write-in vote for mayor, said Clarence Barrett, the city's election officer.

City Council incumbents Boyd Booth and John H. White were re-elected over bids by challengers James Bennett and Eugene Ward.

White topped the voting with 30 votes. Booth received 24; Bennett had 13, and Ward had nine.

Land Board passes Box Canyon agreement

By BRUCE BOTKA
United Press International

BOISE — The Idaho Land Board has approved an agreement designed to protect part of scenic Box Canyon along the Snake River.

The panel agreed 4-1, on Tuesday to a proposal submitted by Earl Hardy of Boise, a trout farmer who owns about 310 acres of the canyon near Hagerman.

The agreement earmarks 120 acres in the upper canyon — including a popular waterfall — for limited public access and scientific study.

However, Hardy will be free to seek permission to build a hydroelectric power plant below the waterfall in the lower canyon.

Land Board member Gov. John Evans cast the only dissenting vote. He said the panel should have conducted a public hearing in the Magic Valley before approving the agreement.

Idaho Conservation League members who live near the canyon had requested the hearing to review the specific agreement. ICL director Pat Ford said Land Board officials had failed to respond to a 2-month-old request for copies.

"I think we are making a mistake," Evans said. "We should always fulfill the requests of the citizens. To err on the side of right and openness is important in all of these kinds of cases."

But Land Board member Attorney General Jim Jones said the fate of Box Canyon had been argued for several years — even in the Legislature. Other members said interested citizens had several weeks to review the public proposal.

"I don't know that there is much more that can be done," Jones said. "I'm sure that everybody has had a chance to make their wishes known. I think the matter is ripe for a decision now."

Hardy offered two months ago to dedicate much of his land for public study if he were given approval to build the hydro plant and to divert water from nearby Blind Canyon to build a new trout farm.

However, Hardy's lawyer, Bill Ringert of Boise, said the pact contained no concrete assurances regarding other projects. Final Land Board action had been delayed while lawyers for the state and Hardy negotiated several details.

The document approved Tuesday calls for Hardy and the board to appoint a committee to handle specific management tasks near the canyon. Those duties will include patrolling the pristine study zone to ensure that it is used by no more than 20 people per day.

Hardy said the agreement would allow preservation of the canyon "in perpetuity," under joint management by the state Parks and Recreation Department and his heirs.

Ringert said Hardy has owned the canyon since 1969 and has been trying for several years to settle the controversy over how the land would be used.

"He is willing to forego the financial potential just to see that the land remains in the condition that it's in," Ringert said of his client.

But the ICL's Ford maintained that most of the important wildlife and scenic values are in the lower canyon, where Hardy said he would seek approval for a "fair-sized" power generator.

"Our members in the area care an awful lot about Box Canyon," Ford said. They are "pretty anguished" about the possibility of hydro development along what is considered a top trout-fishing area, he said.

Bank 'balancing'

Welder Tom Elam did his own high-wire act Tuesday while working on the new Idaho First National Bank building, at Shoshone Street and Third Avenue North in Twin Falls. Elam, who works for Interstate Interior of Boise, was working on the framing for the new building. The building will replace the bank's present offices at 103 Main Ave. E. Contractors hope to complete work by mid-March.

Two manslaughter charges are filed following fatalities

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Two Twin Falls men have been charged with vehicular manslaughter for their involvement in two October accidents.

But in another case, no charges will be filed against a Jerome man who was involved in an accident in which a motorcyclist died.

A felony charge of vehicular manslaughter was filed Tuesday in Fifth District Magistrate Court in Twin Falls against Martin H. Perkins, 23, of Twin Falls. He has been charged in connection with the Oct. 12 death of 18-year-old Timothy Roy Cordier of Twin Falls.

According to the complaint, Perkins was under the influence of alcohol at the time of the accident, which occurred east of Twin Falls on Kimberly Road, when his vehicle ran into the rear of a truck.

Cordier, who was Perkin's passenger, died of internal injuries at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

The driver's alleged drunkenness is the reason the charge has been filed as a felony, according to court records.

A misdemeanor charge of vehicular manslaughter has been filed against 79-year-old Herbert Thieme of Twin Falls.

Thieme allegedly caused an Oct. 19 accident on U.S. 30, west of Twin Falls, when he pulled onto the highway from a country road and into the path of another car. A passenger in the other car, 8-year-old Samana Sibounheuang, died of injuries later that night at a Salt Lake City hospital.

According to the complaint, Thieme committed an illegal act — failure to keep a proper watch — but this did not justify a felony charge.

Thieme and Perkins will be arraigned Nov. 22 in magistrate court.

In the other case, 39-year-old Samuel Kocherhans, of Route 3, Jerome, will not be charged in connection with the Oct. 25 fatal accident near the Depot Grill in Twin Falls.

According to a Twin Falls police report, 27-year-old Irven Wayne Hamlett of Twin Falls put his motorcycle on its side and went into a slide, hitting his head on the bumper of Kocherhans' vehicle, at Minidoka Avenue and Shoshone Street South. Hamlett died of head injuries.

An investigation revealed that Hamlett was under the influence of alcohol at the time, says Fritz Wonderlich, the Twin Falls city attorney. According to witnesses, Hamlett was driving erratically and at a high rate of speed, while Kocherhans was "doing what he was supposed to be doing."

"When you add everything together, the driver of the motorcycle was the primary cause of the accident," Wonderlich says.

Two other men, a Castleford-area rancher and a Twin Falls-area resident, already are facing misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter charges for striking and killing two Twin Falls youths in September. They will go to trial in magistrate court later this year.

Utah financiers to develop hydro sites

By HAL BERNTON
Times News writer

BUHL — A Salt Lake City investment firm has signed an agreement with the Twin Falls Canal Co. to develop three hydro-power sites south of Kimberly.

The agreement, with Bonneville Pacific, was announced Monday night by Tom Nelson, a canal company lawyer, at a meeting of shareholders in Buhl.

Two of the proposed hydro sites are located along the Hight Line Canal. The third is along the Perrine Coulee, said Wynn Johnson, a Bonneville Pacific vice president.

These sites could produce a total of five to eight kilowatts of power.

The terms of the agreement will require Bonneville Pacific to pay an initial $5,000 for the right to conduct a feasibility study at the three sites.

When the study is complete, Bonneville would be required to pay another $25,000 for the right to develop the projects.

Once the feasibility study is complete, Johnson estimated that it would take between 18 and 24 months to bring the three plants on line. The plants would sell their electricity to the Idaho Power Co. at a price approved by the state Public Utilities Commission.

During the plants' first 25 years of operation, Bonneville Pacific would pay the canal company annual royalties. After 25 years, the plants' ownership would revert to the canal company, Johnson said.

The new contract differs from an earlier hydro contract signed by the canal company with Cogeneration Inc., to develop a 1.8-megawatt power plant on Salmon Falls Creek. Under the terms of that contract, Cogeneration will retain permanent ownership of the plant.

A key factor in Bonneville Pacific's interest in the sites is the generous tax incentives offered hydro investors, Johnson said. His firm specializes in attracting investor capital to finance hydro projects, as well as geothermal and bio-mass energy projects.

The actual engineering and construction of the power plants would be contracted out to other firms, Johnson said.

According to Johnson, Bonneville Pacific already is financing four other hydro projects in the Magic Valley and is negotiating a separate hydro-development contract with the Big Wood River Canal Co.

Johnson said the Twin Falls Canal Co. contract had been in the negotiation stage for the past six months.

Bonneville Pacific also has proposed that it do a comprehensive study of the hydro potential of the entire canal company system.

Council refuses to give away alley

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council has denied, by 4-3 vote, the request of local attorney Tommy Walker Jr. for the vacation of an alley behind the Old Times-News Building, off Second Avenue West.

Walker had requested the vacation so the space behind the building, which he recently bought and renovated, could be used for employee parking.

The alley is one of about a dozen downtown that run parallel to the city's streets and intersect with regular alleys. These transverse alleys allow access to the rear of special downtown lots, which front on streets.

Mayor Chris Talkington, Mary McClusky, Paul Newton and Gale Kleinkopf voted against the vacation at Monday night's council meeting.

One of their concerns was that a city water line in the alley be protected. Another was that the city should not give away valuable property, especially when other parking arrangements can be made.

They also argued that approval would generate a series of similar requests from property owners adjacent to other transverse alleys.

Council members Emery Petersen, John Peterson and Alan Wubker voted in favor of the vacation.

They said the alley was of no value to the city, either for traffic circulation or public safety.

In other business Monday night, the council approved the purchase of the six-plane National Guard hangar at the airport for $16,375.

The guard has a 99-year lease from the city on the land on which the hangar is built. City Manager Tom Courtney recommended the purchase since it would return full control over the land to the city.

Sewer-plant negligence trial begins in Boise

BOISE (UPI) — Five women and one man were chosen as jurors Tuesday to weigh claims that the manufacturers and designers of the Twin Falls sewage-treatment plant were responsible for that plant failing to meet environmental standards during the late 1970s.

Attorneys for the city are scheduled to present their opening statements starting at 9:30 a.m. today.

They will be followed by lawyers representing the defendants, among which are the Corvallis, Ore.-based Neptune-Microfloc and Envirotech Systems Inc. of Belmont, Calif. Both companies supplied major components for the treatment plant.

The trial, being held in U.S. District Court in Boise, arises from a suit filed against the city in 1976 by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The federal agency said it was forced, due to alleged shoddy performance by the city, to provide $6 million to rebuild the sewage-treatment plant, originally completed in 1976 at the cost of $7 million.

The city then filed a counterclaim against the manufacturers and designers, alleging negligence and breach of warranties, and requesting damages.

Court officials say the trial, being conducted by Judge Ray McNichols, is expected to last six weeks.

Support group forms for handicapped kids' parents

TWIN FALLS — A parent group that combines education and a forum to share problems, fears and ideas about raising handicapped children has been created by the Magic Valley Easter Seal Center in Twin Falls.

The group will hold its first meeting tonight at 7 at the center, 1527 Laurel Ave.

The purpose of the group is to help parents learn about their child's handicap and teach them about the kind of therapy offered at the center, says Penny Dalton, the center director.

Another reason for starting the group was to provide parents with a platform to share their ideas and support each other, she says.

While the parents are attending the meetings, the children will be learning through play. Dalton says this is not a baby-sitting service but an educational activity.

Members of the Foster Grandparents program will supervise the children, Dalton says.

Dalton urges any parent of a handicapped child to attend the meetings, which will be held once a month. The cost of each session will be $5 per couple or $3 for a single parent. The money will be used to cover expenses, Dalton says.

Each meeting will have a different topic.

A short workshop, "Communication — with Your Child Through Play," will be offered at tonight's meeting.

Next month, Judy Crane of the state Department of Health and Welfare will talk about helping children deal with the stress and excitement of the holidays.

No indigent solution expected

Legislators outline '84 problems for officials

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — Legislators from Cassia and Gooding counties compared notes with the Jerome County commissioners earlier this week and agreed that there are few problems that more money would not correct.

Asked by Commissioner Pam Smith to do a little crystal-ball gazing and predict the major issues that will be debated in the 1984 Legislature, the four legislators present at Monday's informal meeting listed: the 1.5 percent temporary sales tax, educational funding, restructuring the state's tax system and balancing the budget.

Attending the meeting were: Rep. J. Vard Chatburn, R-Albion; Rep. Earnest Hale, R-Burley; Sen. Denton Darrington, R-Declo; and Sen. Wes Trounson, R-Wendell.

The lawmakers gave the commissioners little hope that there will be a solution in the near future to rising indigent costs, which many counties, including Jerome, are facing.

"We feel the same way you do," Chatburn said. "We don't feel the taxpayers should have to shoulder high medical costs for indigents, but I don't think the legislators will propose the solutions."

Carl Butler, the Jerome commission chairman, said he favors a ceiling on what counties can be forced to pay on a single medical bill from an indigent — about $10,000.

"I would like to see the responsibility divided," he said, "with a stipulation the county pays half of the medical bills up to that limit, and the hospital and indigent make up the rest of the cost."

Hale urged the commissioners to get their recommendations on this and other issues before the Legislature early.

"Last-minute proposals don't get very much consideration because we are so pushed in the last few weeks."

Hale said the additional 1.5 percent sales tax, imposed last spring for one year because of the dire financial condition of the state, will be heavily debated.

"I expect it to be retained, with possibly a new expiration date tacked on," he said.

Darrington asked Sheriff Elza Hall and Prosecutor Dennis Adamson for their views on proposals to decriminalize many juvenile offenses. He said this would mean juveniles could not be held in jail unless their acts were of a serious nature.

"This is a controversial subject," he said. "We expect a lot of support and a lot of opposition."

Hall said he is with the opposition.

"We are doing this now with most of our juvenile offenders, but I think we need the possibility of placing the youngster in jail, if that's the best answer."

Murphy again National MVP

By FRED McMANE
United Press International

NEW YORK — Outfielder Dale Murphy, whose all-round skills kept the Atlanta Braves in NL West Division pennant contention until the final days of the season, was named the National League's Most Valuable Player for the second year in a row Tuesday by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

The 27-year-old center fielder became only the fourth player in league history to win MVP honors in successive seasons. He joins Ernie Banks of Chicago (1958-59), Joe Morgan of Cincinnati (1975-76) and Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia (1980-81) as back-to-back winners of the award, which was first presented in 1931.

Murphy, who batted .302 with 36 homers and 121 RBI, received 21 first place votes and 313 points from the 24 writers — two from each NL city — who participated in the balloting to easily outdistance outfielder Andre Dawson of the Montreal Expos. Dawson received one first place vote and 213 points.

Schmidt, a third baseman, finished third with one first place vote and 191 points and third baseman Pedro Guerrero of Los Angeles was fourth with one first place vote and 182 points.

Rounding out the top 10 vote-getters, in order, were outfielder Tim Raines of Montreal (83 points), outfielder Jose Cruz of Houston (76), shortstop Dickie Thon of Houston (67), third baseman Bill Madlock of Pittsburgh (45), relief pitcher Al Holland of Philadelphia (42) and catcher Terry Kennedy of San Diego (37).

Each writer votes for 10 players and points are awarded on a 14, 9, 8, 7, etc. basis.

Murphy's victory was even more one-sided than it was a year ago when he beat out St. Louis outfielder Lonnie Smith for the award. Murphy amassed 283 points last year and beat Smith by 65 points.

Besides his 21 first place votes, Murphy was named second on two ballots and fifth on another. Murphy, Dawson, Schmidt and Guerrero were the only players to be named on all 24 ballots.

A quadruple threat star who can beat you with his bat, glove, throwing arm or running speed, Murphy led the league in RBI and slugging percentage (.540), was second in home runs and runs scored (131) and finished third in on-base percentage. He also stole 30 bases, making him only the sixth player in major league history to accumulate at least 30 homers and 30 stolen bases in a season.

Oakley may again be team to beat in MVC

By SCOTT TUDEHOPE
United Press International

TWIN FALLS — If you were to consult with a palm-reading expert about the life lines of certain girls' Class A basketball teams this year, you'd probably hear that some would be long, some short.

The problem, naturally, is telling just which Magic Valley Conference team will have the longest line.

Leaving our palmistry expert behind for now, close watchers of this level of basketball have been leaning towards three clubs, one of whom represented the league at state last year. In short, coaches say, look long and hard at last year's conference champ, Oakley, while others like Castleford and up-and-coming Murtaugh.

OAKLEY

First a look at the Hornets, a team which returns Cherrilyn Severe, the league-leading scorer and one of the best defenders in the conference. The good news for Oakley fans is that they'll have another year to see the guard take the ball downcourt. The bad news is that she's coming off a bad ankle injury that her coach says is making the senior a little hesitant.

"I hate to say this, but I don't expect her to be at her best for awhile," Bob Lee said. "But we've got five people, who with our extensive subbing last year is just like having five starters back. We're happy and looking forward to this year."

Joining Severe will be Cheri Judd, a junior guard; forwards Leslie Bedke and Terri Adams, both seniors; and Ondra Whittle, a junior center.

Leslie Warr, facing camera, guards a teammate during an Oakley practice Tuesday. The Hornets again look strong in the Magic Valley Conference

Coming off a 13-5 regular season record complete with a state bid isn't bad, especially considering the Hornets only started the sport for girls there four years ago. The progress, Lee said, was worth the pain.

"I think a lot of people around here were surprised what we did," he said. "Everybody's got their strength, and I think ours is our people."

CASTLEFORD

A team which sunk to a miserable 3-10 record last year might find it easy to stay there, but don't count on Castleford fitting that scenario, its coach said.

"I think we'll be competitive," said Coach Richard Dykes, who is recovering from an automobile accident. Filling in for Dykes in pre-season drills has been Laffe Bret-thauer.

"If we can improve our shooting and our defense we'll be in the running. The key, though, is our shooting," Dykes said.

Putting up the ball for the Wolves will be seniors Stacey Hell, who plays both forward and guard; Luann Severa, at forward; Tony Vulgamore, a junior center and forward, and Tracy Hauk, a senior center, who like Dykes is recovering from injuries suffered in an car wreck.

And don't expect the Wolves to back down from their man-to-man defensive coverage. Dykes said that he's still a believer in matching up people on the court and keeping the score within low, predictable limits.

Dietrich girls get out of the blocks fast

HAGERMAN -- The Dietrich Blue Devils blew away with a 10-point fourth-quarter to down Hagerman's girls 29-20 Tuesday night.

Hagerman jumped in front 5-2 in the opening minutes but Dietrich claimed a 12-8 lead by the end of the first quarter and never trailed. The Pirates hung within a point at halftime and were just three back going into the final four minutes. But Shannon Bingham opened the last period with three free throws to start the Blue Devils breakaway.

Valley 39 Murtaugh 26

HAZELTON - The Valley Vikings received balanced scoring Tuesday night as they opened their season with a 39-26 victory over the Murtaugh Red Devils.

Collette Sammons led the Vikings with eight points, followed by six points apiece from Irene Tarango and Janie Hendrix.

Valley capitalized on effective outside shooting to overcome an early Murtaugh lead. Despite the final margin, the Red Devils, led by Joni Perkins' eight points, remained within striking distance of the Vikings until the final minutes.

Valley won the junior varsity preliminary. The score was unreported.

Shoshone 45 Wood River 25

HAILEY — Capitalizing on Wood River's poor shooting and inexperience, the Shoshone Indians received double-figure scoring from three players to ravage the Wolverines, 45-25, in a season opener Tuesday night.

The Indians executed their offense with precision in getting 15 points from Patty O'Maley, 12 from Lisa Logoss and 12 more from Sharon Peterson.

"They're a good team," said Wood River Coach Pat Shannon, who couldn't be so complimentary about his own squad, which shot five percent in the first half in his estimation. "We had some really good opportunities underneath and we couldn't put it in. Poor shooting, our inexperience and Shoshone's ability to put the ball in the basket were probably the show."

Alisa Wright led the Wolverines with 11 points, followed by Dana Pidgeon's nine.

Declo 35 Raft River 23

DECLO — Lyn Darrington scored 14 of Declo's first 16 points Tuesday night to point the Hornets to a 35-23 decision over the Raft River girls.

The six-foot Darrington dominated the inside but it wasn't until the final five minutes of the second quarter that Declo started pulling away.

"We had moments of looking real good and other moments of mediority," said winning Coach Lynn Payne.

Declo, which travels to American Falls Thursday night, won the preliminary 34-33 on Kathy Anderson's last-second shot.

HANSEN — Monica Ward used penetration to pile up 17 points and lead the Richfield girls to a 38-26 decision over Hansen's Huskies Tuesday night.

Ward, playing point guard, got inside with drives either for field goal attempts or free throws. She racked up six field goals and five free throws.

Hansen started out well, scoring off the tip, but couldn't find another point in the first quarter. The Tigers zipped ahead 12-2 during that lapse and Hansen was never able to get closer than seven.

Richfield, which dominated the glass on both ends, also took the preliminary 28-21.

BUHL -- The Buhl Indians opened up a large third-quarter lead and coasted to a 46-37 triumph over the Gooding Senators in a non-conference season opener Tuesday night.

The Indians led Gooding only 19-16 at halftime, as the Senators succeeded in luring Buhl into playing their game — running. But Buhl Coach Janet Smutny soon nipped that in the bud.

Raider Pruitt subject of latest drug probe

GREGG PRUITT
Named at least 3 times

NEW YORK (UPI) — The NFL Tuesday refused comment on reports that Los Angeles Raiders running back Gregg Pruitt had used cocaine.

"We have no comment at all," said NFL spokesman Jim Heffernan. "We're aware of the situation, that's all. I believe the story read he had tried cocaine. We're aware of the testimony."

FBI agent Gordon Johnson testified in a trial in Columbus, Ohio, that Pruitt had been provided cocaine by a self-confessed drug dealer Edward Hanna and at one point owed the man $18,000 for drugs.

Johnson testified in the aggravated murder trial of Joseph Weeks Jr., 35, of Kinsman, one of three persons charged with killing Hanna and Fred Temmens, both 34, inside Hanna's condominium March 6.

Johnson said Weeks had been providing information about Hanna's illegal activities, including auto theft and drug dealing.

Johnson testified Monday that Weeks, acting as a paid informant, told him in August of 1982 that Pruitt was provided cocaine by one of three men and that he owed $18,000 for drugs.

The three men, Johnson said, included Hanna and Mark Jennings, 27, of Niles, who is awaiting trial on the same charges as Weeks. The third man, he said, was someone Hanna always called "Bubba."

In an interview Monday with the Los Angeles Times, Pruitt said he had extensive legitimate business dealings with Hanna but denied that he ever bought cocaine from him or sold him any recently.

"I met Ed Hanna about seven years ago, maybe eight," Pruitt told the Times. "I met him at a golf tournament in Columbus."

Trail Blazers make short work of Sampson's Rockets

By United Press International

Calvin Natt, with 26 points, led a balanced attack Tuesday night, enabling the Portland Trail Blazers to defeat the Houston Rockets 122-104.

Darnell Valentine scored 24 points, Jim Paxson 19 points and Kenny Carr 18 for Portland, 5-2. Mychal Thompson led all players with 16 rebounds. Ralph Sampson of the Rockets led the Rockets with 24 points and 12 rebounds before fouling out. James Bailey added 22 for the Rockets, 2-4.

NBA

The Trail Blazers raced to a 32-19 first-quarter lead behind good offense and poor Rocket shooting. The Blazers made eight layups and shot 52 percent from the field.

The Blazers increased their lead 63-43 at halftime with strong shooting and excellent pressing team defense. The Rockets shot 43 percent from the field and committed 13 turnovers.

Chicago 100, Kansas City 97

In Chicago, Orlando Woolridge scored 29 points and Dave Corzine added 21 to pace Chicago to a victory over the Kansas City Kings, ending the Bulls' three-game losing streak. The Bulls led 77-68 entering the fourth quarter. Rookie Mitchell Wiggins scored the first two Chicago baskets in the final quarter, giving Chicago an 81-72 lead but the Kings rattled off 11 straight points to lead 82-81 on a basket by Eddie Johnson with 5:35 left.

Los Angeles 133, Denver 124

In Denver, Magic Johnson scored 11 of his 29 points in the decisive third quarter and finished with 14 assists and 12 rebounds to pace the Los Angeles Lakers to a 133-124 victory over Denver. Jamaal Wilkes and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar combined for another 43 points as Los Angeles improved its record to 3-2.

Milwaukee 97, New York Knicks 90

In New York, Sidney Moncrief scored 35 points and Bob Lanier keyed a 14-1 fourth-quarter surge Tuesday night, lifting the Milwaukee Bucks to a 97-90 victory over New York for the Knicks' fourth straight loss. Lanier, who had 5 points in the burst, finished with 15 points and 10 rebounds. Junior Bridgeman and Alton Lister added 14 points each. For the Knicks, Bernard King had 22 points and Trick Robinson 20 points and 10 rebounds.

Washington 119, San Diego 113

In Landover, Md., rookie Malone scored 28 points and Jeff Ruland added 27 as the Washington Bullets held off the San Diego Clippers night. Washington, 2-4, led 100-97 midway through the final period before a 10-2 streak stretched the lead to 110-99 with five minutes left. Malone scored 6 points during the spurt and Ruland 4.

Boston 99, Indiana 97

In Indianapolis, Robert Parish hit a five-foot shot off a rebound at the buzzer to give the Boston Celtics a victory over the Indiana Pacers. The last-second shot ended a strong comeback by the Pacers, who battled the Celtics even during the first half but fell behind by 14 to begin the fourth quarter.

In late games, it was Phoenix at Seattle and Atlanta at Golden State.

"These girls have a lot of heart and cool on the court," he said. "Shooting and defense — that's all we need."

MURTAUGH

What the Red Devils have going for them would make any coach green with envy: everybody's coming back.

And while the word "experience" may be run into the dirt by sportswriters, one can't get around using it when describing Murtaugh, a club that posted a sad 4-15 record in 1982.

Coming back will be Marilyn Andersen, a guard selected by many to be among the better players in the league. Anderson's teammates include Joni Perkins and Leslie Curtis, at forward, and center Julie Graff. All the returners are seniors with sophomore Marilyn Nebeker filling in at the other guard position.

"We've had a few long seasons when we've really been without any experience," said Coach Stacey Winn. "This year should be a real plus."

HAGERMAN

Producing quality girls basketball teams at Hagerman has been as predictable as knowing where the state's hottest summer temperatures can be found.

Hagerman, coached by Clark Muscat, pulled out a 14-6 record last year and a bid in the state tournament. Not bad for a club that didn't see a win in their column the first three games out.

"This year we're going to be running a game that was really similar to last year's," Muscat said. "I'd like to see if the personnel we have can adapt to it."

While not exactly bereft of talent, the Pirates did lose Kristin McFadden, one of the most talented centers in all southern Idaho.

Still, because of its winning tradition, Hagerman should score its share of points, paced by guards Amy Pugmire and Jamie Blackford and forward Audra Wagner and Suzanne McIntosh.

HANSEN

Anybody who overlooks Hansen in 1983 could be sorry, says Coach Rod Pruett.

And who in their right mind would? The Huskies ran up a credible 12-6 record last season, beating Oakley at district competition, 55-35. That alone, Pruett said, should serve notice Hansen won't be easy.

"It should be a really balanced conference this year," said Pruett. "At Hansen we've had a winning tradition, and the best way to coach these girls is to stress the positive in each one. It's too easy for them to get down on themselves for the things they do wrong. You start with self-concept."

Possible starters for Hansen include Laura Gatten, who last year played guard and is now at forward; Amy Morrill, another senior and playing guard; Ava Butler, a 5-11 center; and Dawn Hollinger, a guard. Six juniors join the squad this year, vying for that fifth spot.

RAFT RIVER

Raft River, one of the few clubs which had the distinction of beating Oakley not once, but twice during the regular season, returns with seven seniors, according to Coach Olene Warr.

"We lost our number one and two scorers," Warr said. "But with those seven coming back and all the rest, we're really pleased with the turnout."

Leading the squad that went 11-7 last season are seniors Doreen Jones, a 5-11 center; Kay Rigby, another 5-11 center/forward; and Lisa Jones, Sherylee Buckway, Holly Hall, Sherry Hall and Stephanie Warr, all guards.

"We've got a lot of quickness at the guard line," the coach said. "But they're erratic. Ball handling will continue to be one of the things I'll stress this year. It seems like it's like that every year."

Can a team which beat eventual state-bound Oakley on two occasions do it again?

"I sure hope so," Warr said. "It all comes down to if you can contain Severe or not. Whoever does that usually has control."

Murphy

A devout Mormon who doesn't smoke or drink, Murphy epitomizes the work ethic. While most players probably would have rested on their laurels after winning an MVP award, Murphy went to the Florida Instructional League two weeks after the 1982 season ended to work on improving his batting skills.

Under manager Joe Torre's tutelage, Murphy learned to hit the ball with authority to right field and handle the pitch on the fists. The results were an improvement of 21 points in his batting average, an increase of 12 RBI and a reduction in strikeouts from 134 to 110.

"I'd say he is probably the best all-round player in either league, probably the most valuable commodity in baseball right now," said baseball's all-time home run king Hank Aaron, the Braves' vice president of player development and an all-round star himself during his playing days.

Murphy's stiffest competition for baseball's best all-round player comes from Dawson. The 29-year-old center fielder hit .299 with 32 homers and 113 RBI and also scored 104 runs. However, he went into a terrible slump over the last two weeks of the season when the Expos needed him most and that no doubt cost him several first place votes.

Schmidt hit only .255 but had 40 homers, tops in the majors, and drove in 109 runs in leading the Phillies to the NL East title. Guerrero batted .298 with 32 homers and 103 RBI in sparking the Dodgers to the NL West pennant.

Fresh cranberries add accents to Pumpkin Cheesecake and Pear Cranberry Compote

Mealtime marvel

It's cranberry time

There's something special about fresh cranberry season, signaling autumn, the coming of Thanksgiving and the excitement of holiday entertaining.

A traditional cranberry relish is just one of the uses of fresh cranberries, as necessary to holiday feasting as the turkey itself. But why stop there, when there are so many other dishes to try, less traditional, but no less delicious.

Fresh cranberries make superb partners for many of the season's vegetables and fruits. Use them to add wonderful flavor and color to sauces, relishes and desserts. And freeze some of this year's crop for use year around.

Try Cranberry Apple Phyllo Crunch as an excellent and easy-to-make accompaniment for turkey or pork. Use fresh berries combined with apples, nuts, brown sugar, cinnamon, butter and phyllo leaves.

Pear-Cranberry Compote is a dessert which contrasts the sweetness of fresh pears with the tartness of fresh cranberries.

CRANBEDRRY-APPLE PHYLLO CRUNCH

3 phyllo leaves, 12 by 17 inches
6 tablespoons butter or margarine

FILLING:
¼ cup butter or margarine
¾ cup fresh cranberries
2 apples, peeled and chopped
¼ cup nuts, chopped
¾ cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Cut phyllo leaves into 2-inch square pieces. Melt 2 tablesppons butter in skillet and add ⅓ of the phyllo, separating pieces. Toss lightly until slightly brown. Remove from pan. Repeat until remaining butter and phyllo are used. Place phyllo along bottom and sides of 1½ quart serving dish.

If desired, reserve some to crumble over top. To make filling, melt butter in in skillet and add remaining ingredients. Stir often until cranberries and apples are tender, but not soft. Some juice will accumulate; if not, add a little water. Place mixture in serving dish and, if desired, sprinkle with reserved phyllo. Serve warm. Serves 6-8.

PEAR-CRANBERRY COMPOTE

6 large, firm Bartlett or Bose pears
1 cup cranberry, cassis or framboise liqueur
3 cups Ocean Spray Cranberry juice cocktail
½ cup sugar
2 cups fresh cranberries
1 cinnamon stick

Peel pears, leaving them whole with stem attached. Place them in a deep saucepan. Add liqueur and enough cranberry juice cocktail to just cover pears. Stir in sugar. Bring to a boil, lower heat and simmer until pears are tender but still hold their shape, about 15 to 20 minutes. Remove from heat and add cranberries and cinnamon stick. Let stand at room temperature until cool. Remove pears and cranberries from syrup; chill. Boil syrup until its reduced to 2 cups. Remove cinnamon stick; cool syrup. Place pears and cranberries in compote, pour syrup over them. Serve chilled with crisp cookies or thin slices of toasted pound cake. Serves 6.

PUMPKIN CHEESECAKE WITH CRANBERRY GLAZE

CRUST:
¾ cup graham cracker crumbs
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons firmly packed light brown sugar

FILLING:
4 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened
1½ cups sugar
5 eggs
¼ cup flour
2 teaspoons pumpkin pie spice
1 can (1 pound) pumpkin
2 tablespoons rum

CRANBERRY GLAZE:
2 cups Ocean Spray fresh cranberries
1¼ cups sugar
½ cup water
1 tablespoon cornstarch

TOPPING:
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
2 tablespoons sugar

Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. Grease 9-inch spring form pan. Combine all crust ingredients and line bottom and side of pan. To make filling, beat cream cheese in a large bowl until fluffy. Gradually add sugar; add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Gradually add flour, spice and pumpkin; blend well. Stir in rum. Pour into crust lined pan.

Bake 1 hour and 45 minutes, or until center feels quite firm when touched. Cool in pan on wire rack. While cake is baking, prepare glaze. Combine cranberries with 1 cup sugar and water in medium-sized saucepan. Bring to boil; cook 2 minutes. Combine ¼ cup sugar and cornstarch; stir into cranberry mixture. Cook and stir until boiling; cool. When ready to serve, prepare topping. Beat cream and sugar until stiff; pipe around edge of cooled cake with star-tipped pastry bag. Fill center with cranberry glaze. Makes one 9-inch cake.

He learns cooking contests 'squeaky clean'

By ROB KASPER
Baltimore Sun

Judges are supposed to be untouchable.

Not me. I can be reached under any table. Whenever I judge a cooking or drinking contest, I am waiting to be bribed.

Food contests are fashionable these days. Anybody trying to whip up interest in a shindig thinks of whipping up a cooking contest as the event's main attraction.

All these contests need judges to taste the food and pick the "best" dishes. A while back I figured I'd cash in on this trend by agreeing to be a judge at a few local competitions.

I knew there was no money in being a judge, but I figured that the accompanying benefits would let me enjoy life in the FAT lane.

As I saw it, the tone of the judicial style would be set as soon as I set foot at the event.

I would be announced. "Oyez! Oyez! Oyez! All those having business with this contest draw near and give your attention to this honorable judge. A believer in big portions. A devotee of desserts. An uncorker of champagnes."

At that, the contestants would begin giving me seductive winks, knowing nods, even secret notes, all promising me favors in return for favorable consideration of their entry.

As I accepted the invitations to judge various contests, I made a mental list of the bribes I would accept.

A case of fresh oranges on my doorstep each Monday.

They were never offered.

It was with a deep sadness in my heart and a deep empty space in my stomach that I discovered cooking contests are squeaky clean.

When I showed up for duty at a chili cooking contest a couple of months ago at a neighborhood festival, there was not one Oyez to be heard.

I walked around awaiting knowing nods. None came.

My hopes momentarily rose when a crowd gathered in front of the judges' table. I scanned the faces in the crowd, hoping to see some glimmer of bribery.

Instead all I saw was tension. It turned out that reason the crowd had gathered there was because the table was blocking the entrance to the bathrooms.

As judges we were waited on. An able young man placed bowls of chili before us and brought us cold beer to cleanse our palates. As it turned out, I was the only judge who cleaned his palate with beer. The other two judges used water. That was OK with me. I drank their beers.

The winning chili turned out to be the one cooked by the able young man who was serving us. The judges didn't even know he was a contestant. Talk about a missed opportunity.

Some time later I was the judge of an apple pie contest at the City Fair in downtown Baltimore.

Again I awaited winks, nods, or notes. Again none came. I did get a couple of cups of free coffee. And I pocketed the pen they gave me to keep score.

It turned out that the winning apple pie baker, Corene Alston, wasn't even there. She didn't think bribery was necessary. She just sent in her pie and relied on its merits.

I ask you, how's a judge supposed to get along if contests are decided on the basis of merit?

For a time I thought the reason I hadn't tapped into the payola pipeline was that I was being standoffish.

So last week, to eliminate any misunderstanding about how approachable I was, I got to a contest early. Three days early.

I attended a luncheon held on Thursday for a contest that was held on Saturday night.

The Thursday lunch was designed to draw attention to the Gourmet Gala cooking contest on Saturday. Both were sponsored by the March of Dimes.

The lunch consisted of some of the food that I would be tasting as a judge a few days later. I planned on lacing my lunch conversation with hints about my weakness for champagne and chocolate mousse.

Once again I was disappointed.

The food was fine, but the contestants were nowhere to be seen. As for conversation, my table ended up talking about Bridget, a dog that eats power tools.

The night of the Gourmet Gala at the B & O railroad museum, the situation didn't improve. There was a cloth draped over the judges' table. That meant that I could have stashed lots of loot under the table. But regrettably the table was put right out in the middle of the floor. Even a veteran precinct captain would have been afraid to deliver the goods with all those people watching.

Later in the evening a band began to loosen up and members of the audience began to dance around the judges' table. This was great opportunity to "make a drop." A few strapless gowns threatened, but nothing dropped.

I discussed the lack of bribes with William E. Rice, the editor of Food & Wine magazine and one of the other judges at the event. He suggested that at the next contest I arrive early and put on a name tag identifying myself as a judge, then mingle with the contestants.

It may work. But I've got another idea as well.

I'm going to start educating the contestants. I am in the process of writing a little book temporarily titled "Warmin' Up the Judge — Surefire Ways to Win Cooking Contests."

I don't want to slow sales of this work, but here are a few of the book's central ideas.

First, play to the prejudices of the bench. In other words, don't feed vegetarian chili to a judge born in Dodge City.

Thirdly, think grease, as in greasing palms.

Americans' health improving

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Eeitor

Considering the current epidemics — AIDS, teenage pregnancy, genital herpes — there's room for improvement in the nation's report card on health.

Dr. Elizabeth Whelan, a crusader who describes herself as a bearer of good news, allows that. But taking the long view, she says Americans never have been healthier.

She provides statistical support for her claim in a report, "America's Health, A Century of Progress But a Time of Despair," just issued by the organization Dr. Whelan heads, the American Council on Science and Health, a consumer education group that tries to present scientifically-balanced evaluations of issues relating to food, chemicals, the environment and health.

The new report from the group, which has offices in New York City and Summit, N.J., says common measures of the health status of a population — life expectancy, death rate and infant mortality — have improved significantly among Americans during the 20th century.

"Despair," referred to in the report's title, refers to concern engendered by health scares, Dr. Whelan said in an interview. She said her group's investigations show many of the "scares" are unfounded or on weak ground scientifically.

"Allegations that the health of Americans has deteriorated as a result of modern lifestyle and technology are not supported by national health statistics," she said.

"On the contrary, these statistics indicate that Americans are healthier than ever before.

Allen Wilson
Intermountain gardening

REXBURG — House plants make excellent gifts for Christmas and other special occasions. By starting some plants now, you can have some inexpensive and great gifts for friends for Christmas.

Attractive hanging baskets can be grown by planting several small, inexpensive plants into a container and growing them into a large plant. Plants in 2½-inch pots usually sell for less than a dollar and sometimes as low as 39 cents. Three plants placed near the outer edge of a 6-inch container give the appearance of a large established plant. Larger containers may require 5 or more plants.

Some easy to grow hanging plants are Spider Plant, Creeping Charlie, English Ivy, Grape Ivy, Devils Ivy, Philodendron, and Wandering Jew. All of these plants can also be started easily from cuttings rooted in the home. Of course it takes longer to develop a large plant. I like to root a dozen or more cuttings directly into the container where they will be growing. This achieves a faster effect and eliminates the need for transplanting.

I generally do not like to mix plants in a hanging basket, but a mixture of several different types of English Ivy can be very attractive. English Ivy comes in needlepoint, heart shape, and several variegated forms. Several different unique combinations can be made.

Dish Gardens

Dish gardens are also easy and inexpensive to make. They do not need time to grow to a larger size and can be made just before they are given as a gift. You may already have some dishes which would make good planters. Another good inexpensive source for dishes is a thrift or second hand store.

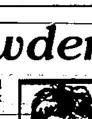
New milk powder delicious



Willetta Warberg
On food

There's something new in most of our local supermarkets' dry milk sections. It is a powdered milk alternative which is made from sweet whey.

The beverage mix is called Nutra-Licious. It is delicious but not quite as totally nutritious as skim milk.

The powder is packaged in milk carton look-a-likes and is being marketed by Natural Way Products, a Burley firm.

When mixed with water, the drink looks like milk. It can pass for milk but for very sweet milk. Despite the sweetness, it is half the calorie count of the same amount of two-percent lowfat milk.

Probably the best use for this low-cost milk alternative is in cooking and baking. Because of the whey's sweetness, it will provide a substitute for at least 50 percent of sugar requirements in your recipes.

Following are a few recipes developed by Natural Way Products:

CAKE DOUGHNUTS

Crisco oil
3⅓ cups all-purpose flour
1 cup sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground nutmeg
2 tablespoons Crisco oil
2 eggs
¾ cup Nutra-Licious

Heat 2-3 inches of oil in a deep-fat fryer or heavy kettle to 375 degrees. Beat 1½ cups of flour and remaining ingredients in a large mixer bowl on low speed, scraping bowl constantly, for 30 seconds. Beat on medium speed, scraping the bowl occasionally, 2 minutes. Stir in remaining flour.

Turn dough onto well-floured cloth-covered board; roll around lightly to coat with flour. Roll gently to a ⅜-inch thickness. Cut with a floured doughnut cutter. Slide doughnuts into the hot oil with a wide spatula. Turn doughnuts as they rise to surface. Fry until golden brown, 1 to 1½ minutes on each side. Remove from the oil; do not prick doughnuts. Drain on paper towels. Serve plain, sugared or frosted. Makes 2 dozen doughnuts.

DUMPLINGS

Dumplings are cooked on top of bubbling stews — 10 minutes uncovered for lightness and 20 minutes to cook them through.

3 tablespoons Crisco oil
1¼ cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¾ teaspoon salt
¾ cup Nutra-Licious (liquid)

Cut the shortening into flour, baking powder and salt until mixture resembles fine crumbs. Stir in whey. Drop dough by spoonfuls onto hot meat or vegetables in the boiling stew. Do not drop the dough directly into the liquid. Cook uncovered for 10 minutes. Cover and cook about 10 minutes longer. Makes 8-10 dumplings.

CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

½ cup Nutra-Licious dry
½ cup honey
⅔ cup Crisco oil
1 egg
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups all-purpose flour or whole wheat

Quick stir-fry meal, Pork Strips Oriental, makes eight servings, is tasty combination

Stir-fry entree great meal on run

RICHMOND, Va. — Does your typical weekday include a full day of work followed by picking up the kids, stopping at tha cleaners and running by the drugstore?

If so, dinner is usually a "meal on the run" with little thought to nutrition and food costs.

Dining at home can be a whole new experience when you prepare Pork Strips Oriental. One recipe makes eight servings: dinner for four, plus four individual servings which are bundle-wrapped in heavy duty aluminum foil and tucked away in the freezer for another meal.

Marinated pork strips are stir-fryed in a Ductch oven or large saucepot. Crisp-tender carrots, green pepper, celery and onion give an added crunch to this tasty combination. Rice is not needed, cooked linquine is added to make a complete meal.

Heavy duty foil is the perfect wrap for individual servings of a "home-cooked" entree. It can be molded and shaped to hold different amounts, plus it protects against freezer burn. At mealtime individual servings can be heated in a conventional or microwave oven for a great "meal on the run."

PORK STRIPS ORIENTAL

Marinated Pork:
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon ground ginger
- 2 teaspoons soy sauce
- 1½ pounds boneless lean pork, cut into 2- by ¼-inch strips

Vegetables:
- ⅓ cup vegetable oil
- 4 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 2 green peppers, cut in 1-inch cubes
- 3 cups diagonally sliced carrots, cut ¼-inch thick
- 3 cups sliced celery
- 6 green onions, sliced
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons soy sauce
- 1 can, 10¾ oz., chicken broth
- 8 ounces linguine, broken in 2-inch lengths
- Toasted seasame seed
- Soy sauce

Combine cornstarch, salt, sugar, ginger and soy sauce; add pork strips and mix well. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for 20 minutes. Heat oil in Duch oven or large saucepot over medium-high heat. Add garlic; saute several minutes. Add pork and marinade; saute until pork is no longer pink. Add green pepper, carrots, celery and onion. Cook, stirring constantly, 5 minutes. Cover and cook over medium-high heat for 4 minutes or until the vegetables are crisp-tender, stirring several times. Combine cornstarch, soy sauce and chicken broth. Stir into pork mixture; cook 3 minutes. Cook linquine for the minimum recommended on the package and drain. Stir in cooked linquine; cook until heated through. To make 4 serving, place 1½ cups of pork and vegetables on each plate; sprinkle with sesame seed and soy sauce, if desired. Serve immediately.

To Freeze four individual servings:

Tear off four 14-inch squares of heavy duty foil. Place 1½ cups of pork and vegetables on each square. Bring the 4 corners of foil up together in a pyramid shape. Fold the open edges together in a series of locked folds until foil is tightly molded and sealed against the food. Label, date and freeze on a baking sheet. When frozen, remove the baking sheet. To serve: preheat oven to 425 degrees. Place frozn bundle on baking sheet. Bake for 35 minutes or until heated through. Sprinkle with seasame seed and soy sauce, if desired.

Microwave Oven Reheating:

Remove foil from frozen bundle. Place on microwave-safe plate; cover with plastic wrap, turning back one edge to vent. Micro-cook on medium power setting for 6 to 7 minutes or until heated through, turning once. Sprinkle with sesame seed and soy sauce, if desired.

He dances over her feelings

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are 70 and retired. Our hobby is dancing. So many of our contemporaries have taken to their rocking chairs that we are thrown together with younger people at our favorite club — where we dine and dance several nights a week.

It seems my husband has become infatuated with a young (to us), 40-year-old, married, sexy, uninhibited psychologist with whom he loves to dance. When they end a dance together, she clasps her hands around his neck and looks adoringly into his eyes as he holds her close for a very long time. Meanwhile everyone sees this.

When these two say good night, there are long, lingering hugs and kisses. In spite of my tears and pleading, my husband continues to carry on this way with her. Her husband just laughs and doesn't seem to care.

Well, I care. How can I cope with this situation, which has depressed me for over a year? My husband is a wonderful man and he doesn't lack for affection at home, but I can't handle this. I've been to two marriage counselors without success. Now what?

— HURTING IN N.Y.

DEAR HURTING: You say you have been to two marriage counselors without success? What about your "wonderful" husband?

If he hasn't gone, he should waltz over to a family therapist. He needs to hear from a professional that his inappropriate public behavior is humiliating his wife and undermining her health.

And don't rule out the possibility that his cruelty could be due to a physical or mental abnormality, in which case he needs to see his physician.

DEAR ABBY: I am really getting disgusted with a topic that arises every time my so-called boyfriend and I eat together. He always manages to ask me if I'm on a diet. My answer is, "No, I'm not." I know he's hinting, but I am happy the way I am.

Abby, I weigh 145 pounds, which is about right for my 5 feet 9 inches. My boyfriend is 5 feet 11 and weights 185. I'm 24 and he's 26, and I weigh the same as I did when he met me eight years ago.

I've made it clear that I am tired of diet questions, but he keeps asking.

What should I do?

— I'M OK

DEAR OK: Tell him that you like yourself the way you are, and if he doesn't, he should either keep his opinions to himself or find himself a thinner girl.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple, "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Listen to your own drummer in working

Do chores in segments. Allow a few hours each day at your best time and quit when the clock tells you to. Don't try to do it the way Aunt Susie or the book told you to. For cleaning jobs, as well as for other major projects in your life, listen to your own drummer.

BEAUTY BRIEFS: Walking up and down stairs is a great exercise to strengthen the legs, especially important for ski buffs. However, for those of us who are cliff dwellers (inhabitants of apartment buildings), stairs are hard to come by. If you have a sturdy stepladder, drag it out and climb up and down until you huff and you puff (with your doctor's permission, of course).

TIMELY TIPS: You can also slim down your figure as well as your food budget if you bend and stretch at the supermarket. Many vendors stock the highest-priced item at eye level. It's an old trick of the trade. Stretch to reach items on high shelves. Stoop to find cheaper goodies tucked away on lower shelves.

DEAR DORSEY: I am a tea drinker, and often experiment by buying herbal teas. Sometimes I like the new taste. But when I buy herbal teas that do not suit me, they are not wasted. I store them in my linen cabinet and dresser drawers where they are as effective as sachets. Also, a few tea bags tied together and attached to the tub faucet provide me with a fragrant bath. If you use this letter, please send the $5 to the Neediest Families Christmas Fund. Love your column.

NANCY HARVEY

Many thanks for the kind words and the loot for our neediest kids!

Christmas special: Make Dorsey's rug yarn cuddlies—a poodle, cat, panda teddy bear or Hans or Mitzi Tyrolean dolls. Send $1 for each set of instructions or $5 for all six. Enclose a long, stamped self-addressed envelope and mail to Dorsey Connors, the Sun-Times, 401 N. Wabash, Chicago 60611.

Why not map showi ng best eateries?

By LOUIS SZATHMARY
Chicago Sun-Times

Ideas are a dime a dozen -- even in the worst inflationary times. I know, because I have grosses of ideas, dozens of dozens. But I also know that if I nurse an idea for years and never do anything about it, I might as well forget it. I'm not angry if someone else can "run with it."

I've had one idea for more than 25 years that has never borne fruit: to go to one of the good mapmaking companies, such as Rand McNally, and persuade it to make a map of the United States showing a couple of hundred chef-owned restaurants from coast to coast. These are usually small establishments, off the beaten path because the chef-owners know that people will travel for good food.

Whenever I go to Las Vegas (which I do at least twice a year because of my affiliation with the University of Nevada at Las Vegas), I look forward to dining at one of the finest chef-owned restaurants in the United States. Andre's is in the city proper, at 401 S. Sixth St., but this is a small street in a residential area a few blocks from the old downtown.

When you enter Andre's, Las Vegas disappears and you find yourself in a charming French countryside restaurant. An inviting bar urges you to stop for a drink.

The fragrances that fill Andre's originate in the kitchen -- a whiff of sweet butter, a scent of strong coffee, grilled meats or fresh fruits, mingled with chocolate, hazelnut and the intriguing aromas of cheeses. The predominant fragrance is that of fresh bread -- unquestionably the best in the state of Nevada. No wonder, because Andre Rochat also owns and operates a French bakery not far from the restaurant.

At Andre's, the menu is first-class in the sense that the chef-owner knows his limitations and wants to deliver all he promises instead of disappointing with experimental mishaps. Yet the price range is surprisingly low for the quality of the food and service. The average meal runs from $25 to $35, and you always feel that you are paying too little, not too much.

In this column I always try to give you a recipe you can repeat at home. Sometimes it's hard to match the skill and equipment of a fine restaurant. But on my recent visit to Andre's, I was served a remarkably good salad that you can make at home with reasonable success. It is made with assorted greens, a well-balanced oil-and-vinegar dressing, toasted English walnuts, and farm-smoked quail.

Smoked quail is available through several mail-order houses and many fine gourmet stores in major cities. So I really don't think this ingredient will be a limitation.

Smoked Poultry Salad

1 small head curly endive
2 to 3 (depending on size) Belgian or French endive
1 bunch watercress
Ice cubes
1 smoked quail per person, or 2½ to 3 ounces smoked turkey (boneless, skinless weight) per person; or smoked pheasant or other smoked bird
Dressing (recipe follows)
½ cup chicken stock; or a mixture of ¼ cup chicken stock and ¼ cup white wine
½ cup English walnut halves or broken pieces; or same amount of pecans
1 to 1½ tablespoons butter
Dressing:
½ teaspoon dried tarragon leaves; or ¼ cup chopped fresh tarragon leaves
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons plain white vinegar

Salt and freshly ground black pepper, to taste (be careful with salt; smoked bird is salty)
8 tablespoons fine-quality olive oil

Wash, pick over and cut greens. Place in a large bowl and cover with a wet towel with a couple handfuls of ice cubes on top of towel. Refrigerate for 1 to 2 hours.

If you use frozen, smoked quail, thaw following package directions. Split birds in half and debone as much as possible, discarding rib cage, backbone and wing tips, and leaving only major bones in drumstick, thigh and first wing joint.

If you use smoked turkey, cut it into strips about 1½ inches long and ½ inch thick. If you use smoked pheasant, remove bones and then shred meat or cut into strips.

Let prepared meat stand at room temperature while you prepare dressing.

If you use dried tarragon, combine it with water and bring to a rapid boil in a small saucepan. Immediately remove from heat, add vinegar, cover and let steep for 10 minutes. Strain and discard tarragon. Add salt and pepper to taste, then add oil drop by drop while beating in a bowl of an electric mixer with wire whisk. Beat until all oil is added.

If you use fresh tarragon, start by combining water, vinegar, salt and pepper, beat in oil, then add fresh tarragon.

After preparing dressing, heat an empty frying pan until warm. Add chicken stock, heat through, and add smoked poultry. Increase heat to high, turn meat quickly and immediately lower heat to medium low. Cover and cook for 2 minutes, or until meat is warmed through.

Toss greens with dressing and distribute on individual salad plates. Meanwhile, in a second frying pan, quickly toast walnuts with butter, shaking and turning them to be sure they don't burn.

Distribute smoked poultry over greens, sprinkle generously with walnuts, and serve at once with freshly baked French bread and sweet butter. Serves 8.

Baby Tears Pilea is a good creeping plant and is not so aggressive as the regular Baby Tears. Dracaena, Ferns, Palms and Chinese Evergreen are good upright plants. Cactus is ideal because it so slow growing. Jade plant combines well with cactus.

All container plants should be planted into a loose, porous potting soil. Cactus does well in a mix which is at least half sand. Since dish gardens seldom have drainage holes, a layer of charcoal on the bottom of the container will prevent souring.

Refunders report big savings

By MARTIN SLOANE
United Feature Syndicate

"Why did you become a couponer and refunder?" I asked Glena Quirk of Pensacola, Fla.

"I got into it because I was a skeptic," she replied. "I didn't think a person could really save money with coupons. I said I would try it for a year and now I'm hooked. I save more than 50 percent on my grocery bills. You'll excuse me, I've got to get back to trading."

Supermarket Shopper

Glena started waving her refund flag indicating that she was looking for another trading partner, and within a few seconds another refunder was waiting to take my seat beside her. All this trading activity was taking place at the recent Fourth Annual Gulf Coast Refunder's Convention in Panama City, Fla.

Some people think couponers and refunders are very tight with a dollar and once they save a few cents, they never let go. This convention was proof that this isn't so. It was held at the Miracle Mile Resort complex's luxurious Gulfside Inn, right on the beach. More than 170 refunders came from all over the Gulf Coast, and most of them had ocean-front rooms!

Some people think a refund convention is just one way for a woman to temporarily escape from home and children. Not so! Yes, most of the conventioneers were women, but quite a few of them were attending with their husbands, who were actively moving around the ballroom trading right alongside them — like Walter and Catherine Hogg from Convent, La. They both belong to a coupon club, and on a recent shopping spree they bought $172 worth of groceries for just $75.

There were also a few young singles at the convention, like Ellen Bergman of New Orleans. She's a special education teacher who uses coupons to help her students with their reading. "It's a lot of fun," said Ellen, "and in a few short months I've saved more than $300."

Some people think that the only ones who can coupon and refund are those who don't work outside the home. Again, not so! Almost half of the conventioneers have full- or part-time jobs! Gail Waite of Norcross, Ga., has a home cleaning service during the day, handles offices at night and runs a catering service on weekends . . . and along with her couponing and refunding she has raised eight children!

"My ambition is to quit my job as a secretary and stay at home and coupon and refund," says Debbie Grimes of Mobile, Ala. "My husband says I couldn't make as much, but I know I could!" Debbie recently traveled to Pensacola for double coupons and purchased $326 worth of groceries for just $52.

"Couponing and refunding has certainly changed," commented Eileen Hendricks of Perdido Beach, Ala. She has been at it for more than 30 years, so she should know. "In the early days, we never spoke about it. We just did it on our own . . . very privately. Today, everyone is talking about it and we see that so many other nice people are doing it."

Quick bread easily made, nutritious

By ANNE TAUBENECK
Chicago Sun-Times

Quick! When you're bored with bran flakes, but in too much of a hurry to knead dough for a yeast-raised coffee cake, it's time for baking-powder bread.

In the time it takes to get the coffee going on a Saturday morning, you can blend—together ingredients for a hearty homemade loaf.

Savor some fresh bread spread with sweet butter, honey or peanut butter for a weekend breakfast. Then cut the rest in slices and wrap each snugly in foil—or plastic wrap. Pop the frozen slices into the microwave or a regular oven and enjoy the taste of home-baked bread on a weekday morning when there's no time to cook.

Quick breads require no kneading, a process used to distribute gas bubbles evenly throughout yeast-leavened dough. But bakers who like to work ingredients with their hands should do so, advises Mel London, author of "Bread Winners" (Rodale, $14.95).

"Sometimes it helps to turn the dough out onto a floured board just as you do with yeast breads and then blend it more thoroughly with your hands," Rodale writes. "This will help keep the bread from being lumpy."

Some quick breads have a texture that is closer to cake than bread. Those are best served as a snack or even for dessert. For breakfast, however, add fruit and nuts to make a hefty, nutritious loaf. Use whole-wheat flour. Mix in grated carrots, which add crunch and plenty of vitamin A.

The bread is done when the crust is nicely browned and firm to the touch. Remove the hot loaf from the pan when you think it is done; the bottom should be lightly browned. (Grease the pan well so that bread pops out easily. If necessary, loosen it from the sides with a thin-bladed knife.)

Some cooks suggest rapping the bottom of the hot loaf; a hollow sound means bread is done. That test is best used for a bread that's light in texture. Some quick breads that are heavy with fruit and nuts will never sound hollow, even when done.

For neater slicing, let bread cool completely before cutting. (Some hot-bread lovers, however, won't be stopped and don't mind coping with crumbs.) If bread will be eaten within a day or two, store well-wrapped at room temperature for best taste. Many quick breads taste better if allowed to stand for six to eight hours so flavors can develop.

Then again, these delicious breads may not last that long. Here are recipes for bakers who like to work fast. All are delicious for breakfast, including James Beard's rich prune bread, made with fruit that has been soaked in sherry or Madeira.

Strawberry-Almond Breakfast Bread

(from "The Book of Bread" by Judith and Evan Jones; Harper & Row, $15.95)

Time: 1 hour, 25 minutes, plus defrosting time
Cost: less than $3.35

1 (10-ounce) package frozen sliced strawberries
2 eggs
½ cup cooking oil
1 cup sugar
1½ cups white flour
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon coarse salt, or ¼ teaspoon table salt
2/3 cup chopped almonds

Defrost strawberries. Beat eggs in a bowl until fluffy. Add oil, sugar and strawberries. Sift together flour, cinnamon, soda and salt into a large mixing bowl. Stir in strawberry mixture, mixing until well-blended; stir in almonds.

Scrape dough into a greased and floured 8-inch loaf pan. Bake in a pre-heated, 350-degree oven for 1 hour, 10 minutes, or until done. Cool in pan for 10 minutes, then turn out onto a rack to cool. Makes 1 loaf.

Apple-Nut Bread

(from "Richard Nelson's American Cooking," New American Library, $18.50)

Time: 1 hour, 30 minutes
Cost: less than $3.90

1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
½ cup honey
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup plain yogurt
1 cup whole-wheat flour
1 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups peeled, chopped apples
1 cup chopped walnuts or macadamia nuts
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon mace
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Grease a 9-by-5-by-3-inch loaf pan with the butter. In a medium-size bowl, beat together oil, honey, eggs, vanilla and yogurt. In a large mixing bowl, combine flours, salt, baking powder, apples, nuts and spices.

Add the honey-oil mixture to the dry ingredients; mix well. Spoon into buttered loaf pan. Bake in pre-heated, 350-degree oven for 1 hour. Makes 1 loaf.

Vegetable Beef Salad fills the bill when time is short, but appetites are long

Hearty salad filling, easily made

MONTEREY, Calif. — When time is short, and appetites are long, you need simple, but filling meals. A hearty salad, tossed together with staples and leftovers is a good solution.

Simple but filling perfectly describes "Vegetable Beef Salad." The beef is strips of a leftover roast or a few slices of meat picked up at the deli, and the vegetables are circles of zucchini and chunks of crisp iceberg lettuce.

The seasoning is corn oil and vinegar given added zest with onion salt and freshly ground black pepper. The topping is shreds of sharp Cheddar or mild Monterey Jack cheese. Serve with crunchy hot garlic bread. The result — a delicious meal in minutes that will satisfy the heartiest of appetites.

During this hectic holiday season, rely on your pantry, refrigerator and your imagination for everyday meal preparation. Iceberg lettuce is a staple that should be waiting in your refrigerator to help with hurried lunches and dinner. With its good keeping quality, it will stay fresh and crisp for well over a week. Just be sure to rinse and thoroughly drain before refrigerating the heads in airtight containers. Then turn to the iceberg for impromptu salads, sandwiches, snacks and other tasty creations.

VEGETABLE BEEF SALAD

2 heads iceberg lettuce
1½ cups sliced zucchini
2 cups julienne cooked beef, about ¾ pound
⅓ cup corn oil
3 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon onion salt
½ teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce. Refrigerate in plastic bag or crisper. Cook zucchini in boiling salted water for 5 to 8 minutes just until tender-crisp; drain. Place zucchini and beef in a shallow dish. Mix corn oil, vinegar, onion salt and pepper; pour over zucchini and beef. Marinate 1 hour or longer. Cut lettuce lengthwise into halves. Place cut-sides down on board; cut into bite-size chunks to make 2 quarts. Place lettuce chunks in 6 individual salad bowls. Spoon zucchini, beef and marinade over lettuce. Makes 6 servings.

Processing often alters nutrition

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Food processing always alters nutritional quality, but "there's nothing wrong with consuming canned or frozen foods as part of a well-balanced diet," says home economist Dorothy Thurber.

The important thing is including daily servings from each of the four food groups — milk, meat, vegetables and fruit and breads and cereals, she said. Ms. Thurber is with the University of California Cooperative Agricultural Extension service in Sacramento.

When certain vegetables are out of season, frozen might be a better choice in terms of both price and nutrients, she said. "Californians are lucky because they can generally get fresh produce year round."

The vegetables are usually quick-frozen shortly after harvest. The blanching process before freezing destroys some nutrients but saves others.

Peppers add taste to dishes

By ROBERT W. STRUBE
Chicago Sun-Times

Peppers bring an extra tingle of flavor to many dishes, including sandwiches, mixed salads and coleslaw.

What is the difference between a red and green bell pepper? Some might guess they are a different variety. The truth is that a green pepper is unripe. When it is left on the vine to ripen, it turns red.

Green peppers are high in vitamin C and best of all they are low in calories. A medium pepper has only 15 calories. Pepper sticks can be prepared in advance and kept in the refrigerator for snacks. Peppers also have bulk that aids in digestion. The mature red sweet pepper is even more nutritious than the green, with 10 times more vitamin A.

When choosing sweet peppers, be sure that they look fresh and firm. They should be thick-fleshed and bright green or red in color.

Italian Stuffed Peppers

6 medium green peppers
3 tablespoons olive or salad oil, divided x6 teaspoon minced garlic
½ cup Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons fresh chopped onion
1 cup diced salami
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced
2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dried leaf oregano
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup water

Wash peppers and cut a thin slice from the stem end of each. Scoop out seeds and pithy portions, leaving the shell intact. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in skillet; add garlic and cook for 1 minute. Add remaining ingredients, except 2 tablespoons oil; mix well. Spoon into pepper shells. Place in baking pan or casserole. Drizzle 1 teaspoon oil over each pepper. Cover and bake in pre-heated, 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. Uncover and bake for 20 minutes. Serves 6.

Mexican Stuffed Peppers

6 large green peppers
2 tablespoons olive or salad oil
⅓ cup tomato paste
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 pounds ground chuck
2½ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons chili powder
½ cup finely chopped almonds or peanuts
1 cup fine, soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons butter or margarine

Wash peppers and cut a thin slice from the stem ends. Remove seeds and pithy portion. Cook in boiling water to cover for 5 minutes. Drain.

Heat oil in a large skillet. Add tomato paste, garlic, meat, salt, chili powder and nuts; cook for 5 minutes over low heat. Spoon into peppers. Sprinkle top with soft bread crumbs and dot with butter. Place in shallow baking pan and add ½ inch water.

Bake in pre-heated, 350-degree oven for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

It is believed that peppers are of American origin, but there is nothing to prove this except the fact that references to peppers do not appear in Greek or Roman writings.

Banks closed

Wall Street says 'Ho hum'

NEW YORK — With banks closed for Election Day and interest rates still at high levels, the stock market went nowhere Tuesday in the slowest trading in nine weeks.

Takeover rumors sparked a little bit of action. But Apple Computer's projection of flat earnings put a damper on all markets. And General Motors dropped despite boosting its quarterly dividend.

The Dow Jones industrial average edged up 0.10 to 1,214.94. The Dow lost 3.45 to 1,214.84 Monday, the lowest level since it finished at 1,206.81 on Sept. 1. In the previous three sessions, it had fallen 22.46 points.

The Dow Jones transportation average rose 2.81 to 585.86 but the Dow utility average shed 0.86 to 136.71.

The New York Stock Exchange index lost 0.13 to 93.33 and the price of an average share decreased four cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.15 to 161.76. Declines topped advances 948-651 among the 1,979 issues traded.

The Big Board volume of 64,900,000 shares, down from 69,400,000 traded Monday, was the slowest turnover since 59,299,730 changed hands on Sept. 2.

"The market simply went through the motions," said Monte Gordon of Dreyfus Corp. "There was no willingness to be counted. The market was backing and filling with no place to go."

"Investors are getting increasingly perturbed at the strength of the economy," Gordon said. "If this continues, the Fed won't be able to ease credit and interest rates won't come down."

Gordon said trading is likely to remain slow the rest of the week until the Treasury completes its $16 billion quarterly refunding that was pushed over to this week because the Senate failed to lift the debt ceiling.

The Treasury's $6.5 billion of three-year notes Monday sold at an average yield of 11.11 percent, down from the 11.43 percent average in August and the lowest since May 16.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 78,960,220 shares, down from 82,246,920 Monday.

The American Stock Exchange index added 0.09 to 212.52 and the price of an average share rose one cent. Declines topped advances 344-240 among the 830 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 5,136,500 shares compared with 5,231,100 Monday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers index of OTC stocks lost 1.55 to 269.57.

On the trading floor, Bankamerica was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up ⅛ to 19¼ following a block of 780,000 shares at 18¾. American Telephone & Telegraph was second.

In the OTC market, Apple Computer fell 3¼ to 17¾ on more than 5.45 million shares after the company said it didn't expect its earnings to improve during the next two quarters.

Gem spud crop 12 % below '82

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Idaho's 1983 potato crop is 12.8 percent smaller than last year's and more than 7 percent less than federal estimates, according to Potato Growers of Idaho officials.

The farmers association is pegging the state's production at a hair more than 80 million hundredweight, far under 1982's total of 91.7 million hundredweight, says PGI executive director Mel Anderson.

In a farm-by-farm survey conducted during the past two weeks, field agents for the group found both potato acreage and per-acre yields to be lower than official estimates from the federal Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

The federal agency's latest forecast in October placed the crop at 86.7 million hundredweight, about 5.5 percent less than the previous year's production.

That is not the last word, though. Richard C. Max, the head statistician in Idaho, says that the service will maks its final potato forecast in mid-December.

Anderson attributes much of the decline in acreage to the payment-in-kind program for wheat.

"They (farmers) explained it to us as putting ground in the PIK program instead of going from grain back into potatoes," he said. The federal PIK program pays growers in grain for idling their land as a device to cut large wheat surpluses.

Anderson also says yields dropped an average of 30 hundredweight an acre because of a smaller crop. "We've got some (cuts) that are as high as 100 (hundredweight an acre) in some areas," he says.

"It came in potatoes that were not sizing up like they have in other years," he says. An early frost had some effects on size, he says.

Consequently, there are fewer of the largest potatoes, ranging from 14 to 16 ounces, and more of those in the mid-range, weighing 6 to 9 ounces, Anderson says.

At the same time, quality has been excellent. "We have a high percentage of U.S. No. 1's," Anderson says.

PGI field representatives checked storage cellars and interviewed growers during the last week of October and first week of November. After amounts in storage were calculated, estimates of fresh-shipped, processed and spoiled potatoes were added to complete the production forecast, Anderson says.

The Crop Reporting Service thinks its methods give as accurate a count as possible, Max says. About two-thirds of the latest estimate was done before Oct. 1, with the rest coming just before the report was released on Oct. 12.

Last year, the PGI and the federal agency generally agreed on the amount of production.

Bert Moulton, the southern Idaho PGI representative, said the association's survey of the Magic Valley found close to 18.5 million hundredweight of potatoes harvested and in cellars now.

Hundredweight totals in potato-producing counties were: Cassia, 6.053 million; Minidoka, 3.967 million; Jerome, 3.775 million; Gooding, 2.086 million; Twin Falls, 2.402 million; and Lincoln, 190,000. Other area counties are small producers, Moulton said.

The total amount of potatoes produced last year in hundredweights were: Cassia, 8.195 million; Minidoka, 5.23 million; Jerome, 4.556; Gooding, 3.104; Twin Falls, 4.761 million; and Lincoln, 1.145 million.

Shift tax credits during '83

Sylvia Porter

When considering year-end tax strategies, it's usual to think in terms of shifting deductions and income.

But the same strategy can be applied to tax credits. You may be able to get the benefit of the credits — dollar-for-dollar reductions — in your tax bill a year sooner.

• Energy credit: There actually are two credits available.

1) You get a 15 percent credit on the first $2,000 of qualified conservation expenses, up to a maximum credit of $300. Qualified expenses include storm doors and windows, weatherstripping and insulation. This credit, though, is available only for energy-saving improvements to homes built before April 20, 1977.

2) You also can get a 40 percent credit on the first $10,000 spent on renewable energy sources for your home up to a maximum credit of $4,000. The cost of generating solar, wind or geothermal energy qualifies for this credit. And the credit is available for new and old homes.

IMMEDIATE TAX ACTION: Of course you'll want to make energy-saving improvements to your home before winter begins. This is not only common sense, it's also tax sense. By making the improvements now instead of, say, in January, you get the tax benefit of the tax credit a full year earlier.

• Rehab Credit: The tax law permits you a credit for substantially rehabilitating income-producing real estate. The credit is 15 percent for buildings at least 30 years old, 20 percent for buildings at least 40 years old and 25 percent for certified historic structures. The 15 percent and 20 percent credits are available only for rehab work on non-residential structures.

The 25 percent credit applies both to residential and to non-residential historic buildings.

YEAR-END TAX MOVE. If at all possible, begin rehabilitation work in the weeks remaining before 1984. Expenses incurred in 1983 count toward the credit for 1983, Prentice-Hall, the tax publisher, points out.

• Political Contributions Credit. You can claim a credit for one-half of your political contributions, up to a maximum of $100 on a joint return. Since 1984 is a presidential election year, you may want to give $200 to your favorite party or candidate.

1983 TAX MOVE. Make the $200 contribution in 1983 rather than in 1984. You can take the $100 credit in 1983 and if you decide to contribute more next year, you can still claim a second credit of up to $100 for 1984. Call your favorite candidate's headquarters for guidance.

Year-end charitable gifts can save you a hefty total of tax dollars, too, as well as help a worthy cause. Say you're filing a joint return. If your taxable income before a charitable deduction is $40,000, your tax savings on a $3,000 donation in 1983 is $1,050; if it's $50,000 your tax savings on a $3,000 donation in 1983 is $1,200; and if your taxable income before the deduction is $70,000, your savings on a $3,000 donation is 1983 comes to $1,320. These are hefty savings indeed.

How much is deductible? You can deduct gifts to public charities up to 50 percent of your adjusted gross income. Your deduction for donations to private foundations is limited to 20 percent of your adjusted gross income. If your gifts to public charities exceed the 50 percent limit, you can carry over the deductions to the five following years.

You get a tax break if you donate property (stock, real estate, artwork) instead of cash: You can deduct the full fair market value of the property you donate. So if the property has risen in value, you can deduct the fair market value without having to pay any tax on the appreciation.

There are at least two major exceptions to this rule, so make sure the charity uses your contribution for your maximum advantage.

WHAT TO DO: Have the charity write you a statement clarifying your intent that your gift is for a charitable purpose. Generally, a 1983 charitable contribution can be deducted only if you make payment this year. A mere pledge or promissory note without payment won't give you a deduction this year.

But a check written this year gives you an '83 deduction, even if it's not cashed until 1984. And a contribution made on your bank credit card in '83 will give you a 1983 deduction.

Next: Beware audits even if you report every dollar correctly.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"If you keep your mouth shut, you will never put your foot in it."--Austin O'Malley.

In a recent team match, one East doubled the heart game and the other remained silent. Guess who had to contend with the taste of an oversized shoe.

At the first table, East restrained himself over one no-trump but frustration drove him to an injudicious double of four hearts. The double had little to gain and much to lose as proven by the events that were to follow.

Dummy's spade ace won and when a low heart was led from dummy, there were no problems for South. East's maximum take was one heart and two diamonds and South chalked up a doubled game.

In the replay, East passed quietly throughout. A club lead was won by dummy's ace. A trump was led from dummy, and East falsecarded with a casual king. South won, but now he had a problem.

If East's king were truly a singleton, South would have to lose two trumps to West's Q-10, plus the obvious two diamonds (or one down). Understandably, South took a spade finesse in hopes of shedding one of the losing diamonds and the defenders now had their four tricks.

Impulsive doubles lay long odds. They have little to gain and much to lose, especially when the double provides declarer with an excellent road map for the play.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"Honesty isn't any policy at all; it's a state of mind or it isn't honesty." -- Eugene L'Hote.

How honest should one be at the bridge table? In matters of propriety, ethics and principle, one must be beyond reproach. In matters of deceptive play ...well, that's a different story.

South wins the spade jack and draws three rounds of trumps. What should East discard to keep from misleading partner?

The only card of possible value that East holds is the club queen. And misleading partner is not the issue. The real question is how to best convince South to guess wrong in clubs. (If there is no club guess needed, there is little chance to beat the slam.)

If South is a "believer," East should play the eight of clubs. If South thinks that East is honest enough to tell him where the club ace is, South will undoubtedly lead a club to dummy's jack and East's queen and the slam goes one down.

Now put yourself in South's chair. How many Easts do you know who will give you an honest reading in situations such as this? Not many, obviously. But what about this particular East? Is he as naive as he would like for you to be?

Scoring games and slams does not always rest with making the best technical play. Often, psychology plays an important role and it helps to know your opponents.
